Veterans return to Normandy 70 years after D-Day

Pair attended commemoration ceremonies in France

Seventy years later, Ralph W. Hebb still fits into the uniform he wore in his mid-twenties when he was a combat engineer during the Battle of Normandy in World War 2.

"It's just as good as it was in '43," said the Conquerall Mills native, who's been living in Hebbs Cross since 1950.

"I'm no bigger than I was then."

Mr. Hebb and Comrade Frank Hammond of Bridgewater recently returned from the 70th anniversary commemorations of D-Day in France, and Mr. Hebb said he feels fortunate to be able to do that after all these years.

"I'm 95 and in good shape yet."

Mr. Hebb's son, Lynn-Eric, escorted his dad throughout the June 4 to 7 events in the Normandy region and was impressed by the response his dad received.

"It was common to be stopped by French families, French policemen, ordinary citizens and even the ambassador of the Republic of Croatia to France, Ivo Goldstein, to have their pictures taken with my father, in full uniform," said Lynn-Eric Hebb, adding people often lined the roads taking photos or waving flowers as Canadian buses carrying veterans went by.

"When the highway was closed to all cars to allow Canadian convoy of buses to do a quick return to Juno Beach Center from the Ouistraham international ceremony the French drivers whose cars were lined up for kilometres in both ways ... left their cars by the hundreds, walked to the intersections and waved at the Canadian buses as we rushed past with our motorcycle escorts."

The decorated veteran also got to meet some of his active military peers.

"The present-day engineers were very happy to meet a person from the famous 23rd field company," said Lynn-Eric, whose father was part of a well-known battle in which the Canadian Engineers rescued stranded English paratroopers from across the Lower Rhine River.

Bike crash sends riders to hospital

Cyclists went down during Riverport Road Race

By LUKE KENNY
 kenny@southshorenov.ca

RIVERPORT — A crash in a bike race in Riverport on June 15 sent several riders to hospital and left at least one person seriously injured.

The crash happened in front of the Bayport Plant Farm on Route 332 on the third and final lap of the C category race.

"Somebody hit a pothole and it sent them flying and it created a domino effect. I think about a dozen riders went down. It was a fairly good-sized pack of about 25 people," said Al Heubach, who operates the Lunenburg Bike Barn.

Theresa Hawkesworth of South Shore Health confirmed that four people were taken to hospital with injuries resulting from the incident.

Other unconfirmed reports indicate some of the riders suffered injuries to the shoulders and hands, and that one rider from the Halifax area was seriously injured and taken to the QE II in Halifax that evening via ambulance.

The unofficial reports say the seriously injured rider may have broken ribs, a punctured lung and a fractured neck.

"It definitely put a cloud over an otherwise really well run event. The Riverport Road Race has always been really well received and positive. There were a lot of positives from the day, but everyone's thoughts were with people that went down in the crash and their families," said Shane Eno, a member of O'Regans cycling team.

The Riverport Road Race, co-hosted by O'Regans Subaru Cycling and the Lunenburg Bike Barn, is Nova Scotia's longest consecutively running bike race and served as the 2014 Bicycle Nova Scotia Provincial Road Race Championship.

People getting injured is a risk you take when hosting an event like this, which is in its 23rd year, Mr. Heubach said.

Town weighs renewable energy options

Property Assessed Clean Energy program under consideration

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — The Town of Bridgewater is exploring possible community energy retrofit programs.

“Our community has been striving to be a sustainable leader and I think it’s just one more avenue to follow in that regard,” said Councillor Andrew Tanner during a recent meeting.

Sustainability Planner Leon de Vreede presented the idea of a PACE (Property Assessed Clean Energy) program “for retrofitting homes or apartments with better energy technologies such as insulation, solar and geothermal energy systems.”

He explained the town would spend the money on energy improvements on behalf of the property owner.

“The key is that the municipality places a first lien on the property, which is then paid back through taxation of that property before mortgage.”

As part of the PACE program, the lien is paid back over a number of years through tax bills. The town would decide details such as a possible interest rate and the term.

After researching national and international work on PACE programs, town staff determined “the best approach is for the municipality to price those repayments at a rate where the repayment is less than the energy saved,” said Mr. de Vreede, adding this would allow the homeowner to see immediate financial benefit.

Last year, The Nodding Group proposed a solar domestic hot water pilot, which Mr. de Vreede explained is similar to a program in Halifax called Solar City that operates through a PACE program.

“The idea is to install one or two panel solar-hot-water systems on local homes. A total of 10 to 25 was what they suggested in their proposal, at a cost of $6,500 to $7,500 thousand per system.”

Just like the Solar City program, the proposal could be municipally-financed through a PACE program.

Councillor Tanner says the goal is “to find some solutions that work well in our community and have a relatively shorter payback so that if a resident is going to put this on their property tax as a payment component, then we have to make sure the payoff is very good for them.”

The program differs from a regular loan because the amount outstanding is tied to the property instead of the owner, explained Mr. de Vreede.

Outside Halifax, the PACE program is being pursued in areas such as Richmond County, Cape Breton, Digby County and Berwick.

Town staff will conduct further research into the type of energy technologies which would be best suited for the town, such as insulation, solar or geothermal-energy systems. Staff will also look into areas such as the possible stakeholders, community interest, costs and funding options, and are expected to report back to council later this year.

Veterans return to Normandy 70 years after D-Day

VETERANS from A1

“I was on the first boat,” said the elder Mr. Hebb. “As soon as we got out in the open there, [the Germans] opened fire on us.”

He recalled the bullets whizzing over his head as he laid on the deck, and later how the boats were nearly disabled in the middle of the river during a rainstorm.

“It was a wild night,” said Mr. Hebb, before adding, “it was a good night.”

He still often thinks about his four years with the Canadian army, when he made many of his closest friends while in training but when he also experienced dreadful tragedy. For example, his best friend was shot within a month of being sent to France, and he still recalls the time a fellow soldier walking beside him was shot in his tracks.

“That’s how close it was for me,” he said. “But, I mean, you got used to it.”

Mr. Hebb had arrived in the Normandy region in the days following the D-Day landing.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hammond was there for D-Day on June 6, serving with in one of the landing craft transporting troops to Juno Beach.

Both local veterans sat in the front row for the special Juno Beach ceremony earlier this month.

Among the other special events was a commemorative ceremony at the Bény-Sur-Mer Canadian War Cemetery, where more than 2,000 Canadians soldiers are buried.

The trip also included the unveiling of special meter-high markers for each of the 359 Canadians who fell on Juno Beach on June 6, 1944, and an international invitation-only ceremony attended by dignitaries and heads of state including as Queen Elizabeth II, Prime Minister Stephen Harper and US President Barack Obama.

On the final day of the trip, there was a ceremony at Bretteville-Sur-Laize Cemetery, where more than 2,800 Canadian military personnel are buried. After the ceremony, medallions from the Grand Council of Basse-Normandie and souvenirs were given to the Canadian veterans.

In addition, there was a stop at the Abbaye Garden of L’Abbaye d’Ardenne, where German SS units illegally executed a number of Canadian prisoners of war in 1944.

D-Day veteran Frank Hammond, left, attended a commemorative ceremony in Juno Beach earlier this month.

Company proposes New Ross tower replacement

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenov.ca

NEW ROSS — Chester Municipal Council has received an application by Altus Group on behalf of Bell Mobility for the installation of a new wireless communications tower in New Ross.

If approved by council, the proposed structure would be located at civic numbers 5173 and 5175 on Highway 12, about two kilometres north of the village, and would replace an existing 27-metre tower with a 75-metre, self-supporting unit.

The application said the request is being made to increase network capacity in the New Ross area.

In a written report to council, Senior Planner Bill Degrace explained telecommunications towers are not subject to regulation by the municipality, but instead fall under federal jurisdiction.

“Industry Canada encourages municipalities to adopt a policy and procedure for informing the public and encouraging feedback on proposed locations,” Mr. DeGrace wrote. “Accordingly, Chester Municipality’s procedure is found in part ... of the municipal planning strategy which directs the municipality to co-ordinate the public consultation process.”

During a June 12 meeting, staff accepted Mr. DeGrace’s recommendation to refer the request to staff and the planning advisory committee for a report and recommendation, which is the first step in the process.

Bike crash sends riders to hospital

CRASH from A1

“We do have an occasional accident that people go to the hospital for, but this accident seems to be the most serious one we’ve had in 23 years. A number of the riders have called me and said it’s an unfortunate incident, but we all know it’s a risk we take. They all said it’s a great event and to not let it get me down.”

The condition of the road is another story in itself, he said.

“It’s a little bit of an issue, too, and the riders were well aware of that. They were warned beforehand and the potholes were all marked. With the rain, some of the holes were filled with water. One of the things we said at the beginning of the race was, ‘Don’t ride throughout the puddles because they may have a hidden hole there.’ Apparently somebody did.”

It appears it was a high-speed crash, he said, with racers probably travelling around 40 km/h at the time.

“That’s a fairly fast stretch through there, I’ve ridden it many times myself, but I wasn’t racing. That would have been the pack that I was in if I had raced.”

Councillor responds to conflict of interest allegations

By LUKE KENNY
lkenny@southshorenw.ca

COUNTY — A Municipality of Lunenburg councillor under a conflict of interest probe doesn't think the allegations against him warrant an inquiry, but does think it's a good opportunity to have a real discussion about openness and transparency at the municipal level.

"I've had comments from many, many people calling me and offering their support, asking what they can do to help," said Frank Fawson in a recent interview.

During a May 27 meeting, Councillor Fawson's colleagues voted to have the Attorney General's office launch a conflict of interest investigation against him based upon four concerns:

- His request to take out streetlights near his Day-spring home.
- Recent actions respecting fire services.
- Statements regarding "openness and transparency of council."
- Any other statements made by Councillor Fawson against Mayor Don Downe, council and/or municipal staff.

In respect to the first item, Councillor Fawson said his request was made through municipal policy and endorsed by staff.

"If that wasn't what council wanted then they should review the policy and change the policy."

Some members of the community later came forward and said the lights were important for public safety and, admitting an oversight on his part, Councillor Fawson said he has since agreed to pay for the re-installation.

He said the second item, regarding public comments made by some of his colleagues about specific volunteer firefighters during a March meeting, was an item brought to him by constituents, and that he shared their concerns.

"Our volunteer firefighters provide emergency services to all of us at no cost for their time. It's baffling for me to understand why any elected representative would speak the way some of them did in March," said Councillor Fawson.

"I acted on their behalf in that case and they were very thankful and very supportive of me doing that, so, I think I was acting in the interests of my residents and firefighters."

Municipality of Lunenburg Councillor Frank Fawson is under investigation for conflict of interest allegations.

Two firefighters eventually received public apologies from some of Councillor Fawson's colleagues on May 27 as a result of their earlier comments.

The third item, openness and transparency of council, is an issue he said has been raised repeatedly by municipal residents during public meetings, in newspapers and to Councillor Fawson himself.

"I feel it's my duty as an elected representative to voice the concerns of the residents of the municipality. If I can't do that, then why am I elected as a councillor? It's part of my job as far as I'm concerned."

The fourth item is confusing and vague, he said, adding staff does a good job of providing information to the public and council, and their degree of openness and transparency fills him with optimism.

"I don't have any problem with the role staff is playing, and I said that very clearly, so I'm a little confused about this part of it that suggests I'm saying something negative about staff," said Councillor Fawson.

"Many residents of the municipality in my area here have said that's what they elected me for and tell me to continue speaking up. I'm being guided by that, I'm acting on their behalf. If I'm not doing a good job for them, then the next election they can make that decision, and they should be the ones making the deci-

LCLC hosts public broadcast of funeral service

BRIDGEWATER — School students presented letters of thank-you and condolence to appreciative RCMP officers before a June 10 live broadcast of the regimental funeral for three New Brunswick Mounties gunned down in the line of duty.

"Thank you for helping many communities," wrote Landen Harvey, one of the children from New Ross Consolidated School who presented an envelope full of letters to Lunenburg County RCMP Constables Shaun Coady and Rodney Arsenault outside the Lunenburg County Lifestyle Centre in Bridgewater.

"We are very sorry for your loss," added a note from Jenna Turner.

"We are very sorry for all of the officers that were injured," Jenna Turner's letter continued. "We hope the officers are back on their feet soon."

"You will be always remembered by your bravery," wrote Madison Gallagher.

Cst. Coady was touched by the students' efforts.

"It means a lot to us," he told them as he was handed the envelope. "Thanks very much."

Uniformed officers, including some in Red Serge, were joined by first responder colleagues and others who watched the funeral service from arena seating.

"Everybody should pay their respects," said Ernie Allen of Bridgewater, one of the first to enter the arena.

About 70 people gathered at the Lifestyle Centre to watch the service. A representative from a Lunenburg County fire department and a senior paramedic with the province's ambulance service both said it was important to show unity with their friends in law enforcement.

The comfort in numbers wasn't lost on Lunenburg County RCMP officers.

"It means a lot to us to have the community support," Cst. Coady said.

Cst. Brandy Steeves added the outpouring from citizens — from people wearing red to sending cards and giving hugs — had been amazing.

Police officers are "always helping our communities and doing stuff for us," Landen Harvey told southshorenw.ca and the Lunenburg County Progress Bulletin when asked about the importance behind writing his letter to authorities.

"Officers are always serving our country," Jenna Turner said.

"They do so much for us." Thousands of officers attended the Moncton service for RCMP Constables Fabrice Georges Gevaudan, Douglas James Larche and Dave Joseph Ross.

The early June shootings also wounded two other RCMP officers, who were treated in hospital and released.

A Moncton man faces three counts of first-degree murder and two charges of attempted murder in relation to the incident.

School board opts not to open transportation policy

Parent concerned about student safety

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenw.ca

COUNTY — The South Shore Regional School Board has decided not to conduct a formal review of its transportation policy.

Board member Vernon Simms made an earlier notice of motion to review the policy during a June 11 meeting but, following a lengthy discussion, the elected board ultimately decided a full review of the policy was not necessary at this time.

"I think that our transportation policy is not out of whack with any other board in the province at all. It's very much in sync. I do believe our administrative procedures need to be tweaked a little bit," said Superintendent Geoff Cainen.

"I think overall the policy really works for us and the parents."

Melissa Risser, a parent from Lunenburg, attended the meeting and suggested there were some areas of the policy the board should reconsider.

"Student safety needs to be looked at," said Ms Risser, who had asked the town of Lunenburg to fund a walking guard position back in April.

Currently, if a bus stop request is denied, parents can take their concern to a review committee. Ms Risser suggested the board should be more clear with families about this appeal process.

"Parents should have that in writing and know what the decisions are based on," she said, adding there needs to be clarification regarding what the board considers safe or unsafe for students.

"I think a lot of times that appeal or review committee is making their decision based on 'If we make this decision for this ... circumstance, then somebody else is going to expect the same thing to happen,'" she said.

"They need to stop thinking about 'what would somebody else like to see happen.'"

Mr. Cainen said a number of cases have come forward to the review committee this year and in extenuating circumstances the committee went outside of the policy for safety reasons.

"The governing board would like, in September, to sit down and look at all of our policies," said Mr. Cainen, adding some polices may not require a formal review but rather clarification on what they mean and how they operate.

In a formal review, the board would draft changes to the policy which, once accepted, would be reported to stakeholders.

"Student safety needs to be looked at."

A recent analysis of a government database by the Canadian Press shed light on the poor condition of Nova Scotian bridges. Mason Meadow Bridge south of Springfield was rated a four out of nine in its most recent inspection.

Sorry state of our bridges requires change to status quo

Less than a month after a report in this newspaper regarding the sorry state of local bridges, a concrete culvert collapsed and left part of a lane on Route 208 in New Germany in Manning Brook on June 3.

On the heels of that, last week Nova Scotia's top engineer acknowledged to the public accounts committee that the province cannot afford to maintain all its bridges.

It's time for governments to either jump or be pushed into dealing with our crumbling and collapsing bridges.

In May, district bridge engineer Don Coulter told the Progress Bulletin there were a number of them in Lunenburg County in serious condition — rating just a three on a zero-to-nine scale — and a handful on Class K roads not maintained by the province were rated even lower than that.

Still, the bridge which later collapsed in New Germany wasn't among them. It actually passed an inspection on May 6 and was rated in "fair" condition. After it fell down, a structural engineer determined the top of the culvert was not properly reinforced with steel when it was built more than a half century ago.

That hardly inspires confidence in our system. Meanwhile, it's unreasonable to expect the system will become any easier to maintain in the coming years without the provincial government — which is responsible for about 90 per cent of our bridges — making changes to the way it manages that infrastructure.

Consider, according to the CBC, about 4,300 Nova Scotian bridges are over a half-century old, and 13 per cent of the more than 3,000 inspected in 2012 were in poor or worse shape, meaning they had advanced section loss, pieces of concrete falling off, and structure that was worn away by water and sediment.

This comes at a time when the province is grappling with serious economic issues well documented in the Ivany report.

One solution is to close several hundred bridges when they become too expensive to maintain, said Bruce Fitzner, the chief engineer for the Department of Transportation and Infrastructure Renewal, during last week's public accounts committee meeting.

His department has estimated it would cost about $75 million annually over 25 years to get all its bridges in fair to good condition, but that it currently spends approximately half that amount.

We agree with his assessment some bridges probably have to close for financial reasons, as long as there is a nearby detour, low traffic volume, minimal public safety concerns and proper consultations with affected communities.

However, that is only a half measure.

As former Bank of Canada Governor David Dodge said in a new paper for a legal firm last week, now is not the time for federal and provincial governments to fight deficits but instead is the time to take advantage of low interest rates to invest in infrastructure.

"In the current environment of low long-term interest rates, fiscal prudence does not require bringing the annual budget balance to zero almost immediately. Small increases in borrowing requirements to finance infrastructure investment would still lead to declines in the debt-to-GDP ratio," he wrote, as reported by the Toronto Star.

"Governments should expand their investment in infrastructure while restraining growth in their operating expenditures so as to gradually reduce their public debt-to-GDP ratio."

Properly maintaining our public infrastructure should not be a bridge too far.

TO THE EDITOR

Fishermen's hospital has vibrant future

Over the past several years, South Shore Health has worked closely with health care providers and community members to develop a vision for the future of Fishermen's Memorial Hospital. Our collective goal was to build on our strengths to ensure Fishermen's Memorial Hospital continues to meet the needs of the community and has a vibrant role in the delivery of health services for many years to come.

Our collective vision includes improving quality of care and privacy by moving the inpatient beds in the emergency department to another area of the hospital and integrating primary care and urgent care to ensure access to those very important health care services. It also includes a new geriatric assessment unit and community resource centre.

One of the key features of these changes will be to enhance the care and environment for palliative care patients and their families. We want to create a space that offers more privacy and space for families to participate in care and support their loved ones while in hospital. Moving the inpatient beds out of the existing emergency department area will also create more space for new primary care practitioners. This vision has been strongly and consistently endorsed by many groups and individuals within the community.

We have with an architect to look at changes in the physical layout and design at the hospital necessary to achieve this vision. Our original plan included renovating the existing emergency department to support an expanded primary-health-care model that was co-located with the urgent-care area. We also explored an alternate plan. Cost and value for investment has been a key consideration in this process.

After consultation with community stakeholders about the options, the board has reaffirmed South Shore Health's commitment to the original design. This has been communicated to the Department of Health, which is currently evaluating this collaborative model of care delivery. We will keep the community informed of any developments.

In the meantime, we are continuing to invest in Fishermen's Memorial Hospital.

At the same time, the transition to one provincial health authority is underway. As announced last week, an administrator will assume the governance duties of the board of directors effective July 1, 2014. While the board is being replaced, having a clear vision which is supported by the community will position Fishermen's Memorial Hospital well for the future changes in the health system and ensure it continues to play a vitally important role in the delivery of health services within the district.

We can handle the truth

Well, here we go again with more government promises to fix the Bluenose project by spending more taxpayer's money. So now instead of spending $1,000 per working day for useless project management they are spending $2,200 and still there are no answers or explanations.

The government needs to come clean and explain the problems and their proposed solutions. They employ enough PR flacks, so how about a weekly press conference with their new $1,200-a-day project manager?

Premier Stephen McNeil said several months ago the Bluenose project had become an NDP boondoggle and he was right, except now it is his boondoggle. The torch has been passed.

Continued silence only implies cover-up, incompetence and more expense to the citizens of Nova Scotia. Let's have the truth now. We can take it.

Electoral reform needed

Advocates give voice to those they represent, whereas trustees act as they see fit with the trust of those they represent. These are the two faces of representation.

In Canada, there is on average one MP for every 78,000 voters, which is to say there is almost no advocacy for the voice of the people — just trust.

The core problem which needs to be addressed by any electoral reform is the fact that trust given to a few hundred MPs without the mandate to advocate as the voice of 24 million voters. It is no longer working for our representative democracy.

Voters have no vehicle or authority to place a well-informed opinion on the parliamentary record between elections. Instead, political parties and pundits use partisan "consultations" and push polls to create an artificial picture of public opinion, twisting issues for their own benefit, and MPs vote as directed by their party.

The fact that less than 3.6 per cent of the electorate will admit to belonging to one of the five political parties is a thorough indictment of political parties as a vehicle for democracy. And yet, political parties dominate our system and define the voice of our democracy, even while 40 per cent of the electorate doesn't vote.

But voting and participation require perceived value for the participant — as well as a system that favours participation.

Institutionalizing well-informed, unbiased public opinion by placing it on the parliamentary record would go a long way toward giving renewed voice to democracy in Canada.

The idea is simple yet powerful, inclusive yet proportional, practical yet inexpensive. Most importantly, it's constitutional.

RCMP services appreciated

Attention everywhere last week was on the moving funeral and tribute for three RCMP officers killed in Moncton, and just a few days before this horrifying event, in what seemed a totally minor contact, I found how significant the RCMP response to any call can be.

I had installed a new phone which I keep on the table where I sit during the day. The phone has an "emergency" button. I accidentally hit this button and at once was reached by 911. I explained I was sorry and there was no emergency. In the conversation that ensued I learned 911 should not be programmed into a phone in Nova Scotia. I studied my booklet and removed the setting. A very short time after, I was amazed to receive a visit from a friendly and pleasant officer. He explained they had to make sure I was okay.

I am sure most of us do not realize the extent of service we all have, although Moncton has highlighted the tragic extremes it can reach.

This all-out service comes to us from a range of first responders.

Mr. Fawson, give it a rest

I'm getting a little weary of seeing office-seekers using this paper as their personal, unpaid soapbox. Freedom of the press? Absolutely. Every week? That amounts to verbal bullying, not unlike the last failed mayoralty candidate.

Perhaps all of us, if we really believe in democracy and full access to the fifth estate by everyone, should be limited to one letter every two months or six per year.

Take Frank Fawson, for example. His letters appeared in three recent editions of the Lunenburg County Progress Bulletin. His novel-to-be now totals over 1,000 words and his preachy-like approach while raking his fellow councillors and mayor over the coals is tedious and tortuous, especially the repeated use of his pet term "openness and transparency."

I believe this is the same chap who had the power turned off on a number of street lights near his home, claiming they shone in his windows at night. I suppose Mr. Fawson, who obviously thinks he is right to run for a higher office, hasn't heard of installing blinds, shades, shutters, curtains or drapes. I could loan him a few overused newspapers to dampen the brightness. God forbid his lack of creativity should inspire anyone to put an "X" next to his name.

Even more important was the fact he had those lights turned off without consulting the nearby nursing home, nor did he seem to worry about consensus-building with his neighbours. He did say it was his legal right, but is this his idea of representing anyone but himself? Not even his neighbours?

His excuse as to safety of turning them off was the nursing home has its own street lights. That is, on their driveway, not on the public road where employees have to walk home at night.

It doesn't take rocket science to figure out why they were installed in the first place — for the safety for pedestrians, drivers, even for animals crossing the road at night, and protection of car occupants, kids heading home in the winter after school and activities. Can't Mr. Fawson get a simple idea like that? I'd hate to think how he would barge ahead without consensus building on other issues of public interest and safety.

It seems Frank Fawson is now on a bender to patch up his damaged reputation by going on the offensive, which I really find offensive. Pardon my redundancy. By the way, did he have those necessary street lights turned off without consultation as his way of showing "openness and transparency?"

Mr. Fawson, give it a rest, and before you put pen to paper or raise your voice in council chamber pointing your finger at others, try to set a good example first — in your own neighbourhood.

"Openness and transparency," should begin at home, shedding a "little light" on more concern for others, ahead of yourself.

Quarry quandary

How can a quarry open without an application? Without a public consultation? Without approval?

That is what appears to be happening in Walden. A company was apparently turned down for a permit to operate a quarry in Walden last fall.

However, last month the company by-passed the original quarry site and has put in a road over two-kilometres long, wide enough for three dump trucks. They also made a substantial bridge over the headwaters of the Mush-a-Mush River system where Atlantic Salmon spawn.

The company reportedly has plans to bring in a rock crusher.

Will they be driving dump truck after dump truck through Clearland and Mahone Bay? Probably soon.

Will they be driving dump truck after dump truck through Walden where there is a four kilometre section of road in serious disrepair which will remain in poor condition even after 90 per cent of the main road is fixed? Probably soon.

Do they have a right to ruin the ancient generational nesting grounds of snapping turtles which have been climbing up that bank for eons to lay their eggs?

Do they have a right to work within a sensitive wetlands area, destroying vernal pools along the old woods road?

Do they have a right to disturb an aboriginal area possibly of cultural significance?

What is going on in Walden? We would like to know.

Domestic crimes net house arrest

Man threatened, assaulted and pointed gun at girlfriend

By LISA BROWN

lbrown@southshorenov.ca.

COUNTY — Terrorizing his girlfriend over a period of months has netted a Union Square man six months on house arrest.

That's part of a 547-day conditional sentence that Kevin Wayne Robar received June 13 in Bridgewater provincial court after pleading guilty to a string of charges.

Those allegations began back in November 2011, when Mr. Robar admitted pointing a shotgun at his then girlfriend and causing unnecessary pain to a dog by choking it.

He pleaded guilty to assaulting the woman in January 2012, assaulting her again in April of that year while threatening to use an axe, as well as threatening to damage her car.

He admitted assaulting her a third time by choking her on June 21, 2012.

While on the conditional sentence, Mr. Robar must take counselling as directed in a number of areas, including spousal violence intervention. He was ordered to stay away from alcohol, drugs and weapons, and is banned from having firearms for 10 years.

Judge Gregory Lenehan also ordered Mr. Robar to submit a DNA sample for the national criminal data bank.

Mr. Robar, who was living in North River when he committed the crimes, has a prior record which includes assaults, threats and breaches of court orders.

Man found guilty in dog death

By DAVID CARTER

LUNENBURG — A Lunenburg man has been found guilty of animal neglect in connection with the death of his dog last summer.

Jason Remai received the verdict when he appeared before Judge Claudine MacDonald at provincial court in Kentville.

Remai, 36, had been charged under Section 22 of the Animal Protection Act for failing to provide an animal with reasonable protection from injurious heat, following the death of the dog on July 21.

The charges stem from a woman's discovery last July of a Portuguese water dog inside a car in a parking lot at Acadia University.

The woman, with the help of others nearby, broke the car window in an attempt to free the dog, cool it and resuscitate it, but to no avail.

Remai is scheduled to return to provincial court in Kentville on June 25 for sentencing.

Peaceful progress

Lunenburg to consider anti-violence strategy

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenov.ca

LUNENBURG — The end may be in sight for the the three-year "Be the Peace" project, but the vibes it has created will carry on.

That's the hope of Helen Lanthier and Sue Bookchin, who have been facilitating the initiative since it began in 2012.

The two women recently appeared before Lunenburg Council to give an update on what has been accomplished and what is to come, as well as to discuss what role municipalities can play in the program, which is scheduled to officially wrap up next March 15.

The Second Story Women's Centre

strategy has been funded by Status of Women Canada to develop a coordinated community response to gender-based violence, and Ms Lanthier noted Lunenburg's town council it is already providing services such as policing and safe roads to ensure the safety of their constituents.

"We hope that you will agree that violence in homes in Lunenburg is a dire situation that puts not just women, but the whole community at risk ... because often perpetrators use power and control and violence outside the family as well."

She pointed out the Municipal Government Act also gives the town the authority to develop and maintain safe communities, and suggested one thing council could do to help support the Be the Peace movement is to craft a position statement which identifies violence against women as an issue that the town takes seriously and will reflect in their activities that it is not acceptable.

"The second thing you might consider is looking at your municipal policies, one being your group of HR [Human Resources] policies and see which ones might address violence in the workplace, and also steps to be taken when an employee of your town is being abused or assaulted, or accused of assault," Ms Bookchin said.

"You might undertake an examination of all your policies to see how they might inadvertently contain language that disenfranchise women in some way or give them unequal opportunity."

She said council may also look at hosting education sessions for staff, particularly in the recreation department, as they come in contact more often with individuals who may be in abusive situations, as well as do presentations for the general public.

Another of her suggestions was to strike a municipal gender family violence committee to hold events and educational sessions on the subject.

Mayor Rachel Bailey said council will take the information Ms Lanthier and Ms Bookchin have provided them and, with background from staff on what measures the town has in place now, will put the issue on a future agenda for further discussion.

Other local towns and municipalities are being asked to do the same.

"We hope that you will agree that violence in homes in Lunenburg is a dire situation that puts not just women, but the whole community at risk."

Residents upset with treatment of MODL councillor

Dorey under investigation for code of conduct breach

By LUKE KENNY
lkenny@southshorenw.ca

COUNTY — Approximately 50 residents of the Municipality of Lunenburg’s District 6 have voiced their displeasure with council through a petition.

“Since being elected, [District 6] Councillor Dorey has directed his entire energies into representing his constituents. To see this attempt by council to minimize or stop the work he is doing for us and to seek some legal maneuver to remove him from office is not our idea of democracy,” said the correspondence.

“It may be legal but the people elected him and only the people can remove him from being Councillor for District 6.”

The petition was regarding a May 27 meeting of council, when a motion was passed to obtain a legal opinion regarding whether Councillor Frank Fawson and Councillor Terry Dorey were in breach of the municipal code of conduct for “their recent actions respecting the MODL’s suggestion that MODL is not open nor transparent without having specific evidence to back up such claims,” said Councillor Don Zwicker.

“The specific section of the policy to be considered is clause 4-F, ‘Council members will not pursue any procedure calculated to embarrass a fellow member of council or a member of municipal staff.’”

Councillor Dorey left the meeting after that motion was put on the floor and Councillor Fawson was the only one to vote against it.

The petition was on the agenda of a June 10 council meeting, where it was acknowledged by interim CAO Darrell Hiltz.

There was no discussion.

Several of the signees were contacted by this newspaper but declined an opportunity to comment.

“Only the people can remove him from being Councillor for District 6.”

Bridgewater Relay for Life raises over $100,000

BRIDGEWATER — It’s “so far, so good” for Carroll Randall, seven years after being diagnosed with colorectal cancer.

The Bridgewater man endured the long-haul battle associated with a cancer diagnosis, enduring radiation and chemotherapy treatments and three surgeries, but credits the support of his wife, family, friends and co-workers for getting him through the tough times.

He also appreciates his “fishing buddies” who made sure he kept attending excursions to cast a line in the water.

“They never let me feel sorry for myself,” he told the crowd attending Bridgewater’s 12th Relay for Life fundraiser in aid of cancer research.

Mr. Randall, the relay’s honorary chairman, urged those dealing with the diagnosis to find a support team like he did, and emphasized they get educated about their diagnosis, pay attention to medical advice, and keep love, faith and humour in their lives.

Many dozens of Relay for Life participants gathered at the exhibition grounds June 6 in Bridgewater to embark on the 12-hour, overnight fundraising event for the Canadian Cancer Society. Approximately 30 teams took part.

The Relay for Life is the largest cancer awareness event in the world, said Tracy Lusk, the society’s local district coordinator, and Nova Scotia relayers raised $2.5 million in 2013.

“We’re so proud to be standing here this evening with all of you. Isn’t it amazing that we’re part of an international movement to end this disease?,” added Sarah Sweeney, the local leadership chairwoman of the Bridgewater relay.

“We’re here in Bridgewater tonight doing what other relayers are doing in almost 500 events across Canada and in over 19 countries. By walking this track this weekend you are joining forces with over four million people worldwide who want to save more lives.”

This year’s relay raised over $100,000. Another Relay for Life event is planned for June 20 at Chester Area Middle School.

Pine Grove playground being revitalized

Council approves community group proposal

By LUKE KENNY
lkenny@southshorenov.ca

COUNTY — Municipality of Lunenburg council has voted in favour of entering into a management agreement with a non-profit group interested in re-establishing a playground on Delcon Avenue green space in Pine Grove.

"It's not a new park per se, it's a revitalization of an old one that kind of went by the wayside," said Councillor Claudette Garland during a committee of the whole meeting on June 3, when she explained the park was very active many years ago.

"Now there's a resurgence and the new families and small children would like to see this revitalized."

There had been a previous lease agreement dating back to 1999 between the municipality and the Pine Grove Estates Homeowner Association, which developed a playground on the green space.

However, that lease agreement was not renewed, and the association is no longer an active group.

Since the municipality owns the land and therefore assumes liability of any structure on the site, when municipal staff recently conducted a site visit, they deemed the old playground structure to be unsafe and posted signs accordingly.

A community meeting was held on May 26 to inform the community the playground does not meet CSA standards and would need to be taken down.

Residents then expressed a desire to have a new playground built on the site and were willing to form a non-profit group to enter into a management agreement with the municipality, which would allow the group to plan, fundraise and establish a playground while handling day-to-day operations.

"It's very small and they don't want anything elaborate. They're looking at natural playground equipment, not structured industrial, so I'm certainly all for it," Councillor Garland said.

The group would like to salvage whatever wood they can from the old playground to use for the new one.

The municipality has other similar agreements with non-profit associations.

Recreation staff are expected to work with and support the group.

"It's not a new park per se, it's a revitalization of an old one that kind of went by the wayside."

Bridgewater marina plans official opening

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — The Bridgewater marina is back in operation for its second season and an official opening is being planned for next month.

The opening is scheduled for July 17 at Mariner's Landing and is open to stakeholders and the public.

There are 30 slips available for lease, weekly, seasonally, on the weekends or overnight. Another two slips are also available at no charge for the use of small boats, such as canoes or kayaks.

The association has also established a new boathouse in the area.

"When we first started this back in 2007 we saw this marina as an extension of Mariner's Landing, not just a stand-alone operation," says association chair Rob Keevil.

The marina was proposed in 2007 by the riverfront renaissance action team and by 2011, the Bridgewater Marina Association was registered as a non-profit society.

Nursing home reviews fire safety measures

Harbour View Haven responds to L'isle Verte tragedy

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenova.ca

LUNENBURG — The consequences of a nursing home fire can be horrific.

That became abundantly clear back in January when 32 people were killed when a blaze ripped through Residence L'isle Verte, Quebec, which prompted staff and board members at Harbour View Haven Home for Special Care in Lunenburg to begin a review on fire safety at their facility.

"A few months after that I had brought up to the board that maybe we should just have a look at what our safety program are here and see how we fit with the rest of the country," explains Harbour View board member Robert Parks, a former chief of the Lunenburg and District Fire Department.

"It's not because I was not satisfied with what our safety record is, because it's good, but as a fire chief I felt interested in seeing just where we stand."

Director of Operations Wellesley Eisnor then reviewed the home's procedures to determine what improvements had been carried out to enhance safety and what more could be done.

One of the major additions to the fire safety plan at the home was an upgrade to the facility's sprinkler systems, with a price tag of approximately $125,000.

"We got some capital funding the last two years to bring our systems up to today's standards," says Mr Eisnor. "In some areas it met the code for 40 years ago, but it wasn't to the standard of today, and we thought it would be good to have it to that standard."

"As a fire chief I felt interested in seeing just where we stand."

Robert Parks
Board member

He says a new fire pumping system was also installed a couple of years ago when a new addition was built onto the home.

The building is divided into separate compartments by rated fire walls and fire doors "and as soon as the fire alarm goes off, all those compartment doors and corridors go shut ... Those doors have a 45-minute fire rating and the walls between the rooms have a two-hour fire rating."

Other fire-safety related initiatives include monthly fire drills, a mock disaster every three years, quarterly inspections by the facility's sprinkler and alarm provider as well as annual testing of those systems.

The facility is inspected annually by the provincial fire marshal's office and the fire safety plan is also reviewed on a yearly basis. In addition, staff at the home are subject to on-going fire safety training and all new employees are given orientation on emergency procedures.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF THE HASKAP BERRY?

The Haskap berry is quickly becoming a hot topic for fruit growers and lovers alike and is being grown in the heart of Lunenburg County.

This blue berry with its deep crimson juice is taking Nova Scotia by storm and although it has been revered in Japan for generations, it only recently arrived at our shores. It tastes like a combination of raspberry and blackberry and it has the most incredibly deep red coloured flesh.

WHERE DOES IT COME FROM?

The berry hails from Siberia and Northern Japan, where the name 'hasukappu' actually means 'little present on the end of the branch' - the Japanese really have more imagination than whomever named the blueberry - They know the berry as the fruit of 'life longevity and good vision' and nutritionists around North America have been astounded at the amount of vitamins, antioxidants and minerals the berries contain. They were even featured on Dr. Oz a few months ago.

WHERE IS IT GROWN?

LaHave Forests, just outside of Bridgewater, has been instrumental in bringing this exciting, tasty and incredibly nutritious fruit to Nova Scotia and has already won a number of awards for their Haskap products and appeared on the Dragons' Den last year. You can view the segment at www.lahavenaturalfarms.com.

The Haskap grows beautifully on the South Shore. The soil is some of the best in Canada, the annual rainfall means you don't have to worry about watering and we have the longest growing season in Canada, so it is only natural that the plants thrive here. LaHave Forests now has 40 acres of Haskap planted, and is the largest organic Haskap Farm in Canada with plans to expand. If you are interested in growing the Haskap, their website has everything you could possibly need to know, they work with an agricultural realtor to find perfect land for the Haskap and will help you buy the plants, establish an orchard and grow the berries, they'll even help you harvest if you ask nicely.

WHAT CAN IT MAKE?

The Haskap can be used in any recipe you use any other berries, with the added benefit that it is healthier and has a stronger taste. You can even make wine with it!

LaHave Forests launched the first ever commercial Haskap products in North America in November last year under the 'haskapa' brand (www.haskapa.com) and immediately won the 'World's Best New Juice 2013' at the World Juice Awards and The Taste of Nova Scotia Prestige Award's 'Most Innovative product 2013.'

This year they are finalists at the Global Food Awards and are waiting to see if they reach the final round of the world 'Jampionships' (yes, they really exist!). Their products can be found throughout Nova Scotia and there are a number of retailers around the South Shore, just visit their website and click 'buy here' for a list of locations.

This incredible new berry is the perfect complement to existing crops as they fruit so early in the season. Traditionally they can be harvested at the end of June, although this year it may be a little later.

WHERE CAN I FIND OUT MORE?

If you are interested in learning more about this exciting new fruit, then LaHave Forests have their third Annual Haskap Open day this Saturday, June 21st, you can turn up anytime to find out about the berry, taste the products and meet growers and processors. We look forward to seeing you there!

Students earn provincial heritage awards

BRIDGEWATER — Two Grade 5 students from Bridgewater Elementary School have received provincial honours for their outstanding work in honouring Canadian heritage.

Morgan Garnhum and Jonah McCarthy had award-winning heritage fair projects at last month's Nova Scotia Provincial Heritage Fair at Saint Mary's University, where more than 50 students from Grades 4 to 9 who had advanced out of their respective regions presented their projects to judges.

Morgan received the African Canadian heritage award for his project about William Hall.

"He grew up in Hansport, Nova Scotia and he's a young African-Canadian. He won the highest military medal awarded for valour in face of danger — the Victoria Cross," says Morgan.

Mr. Hall was buried without military honours from Canada and it was more than 30 years after his death in 1904 that he was honoured for his service.

"He overcame barriers such as racism and doubt and that was not easy," explains Morgan.

As part of Morgan's award, he received a stack of books.

"It was awesome. I'm going to read all of them."

Meanwhile, his schoolmate, Jonah McCarthy, was presented with the heritage fair's Parks Canada award for his project about Melanson Settlement.

"I chose to do it because it's about my family tree and barely anybody heard about it and I decided to get the word out," says Jonah.

The Melanson Settlement, he explains, is an Acadian settlement founded by the Charles Melanson and is now a national historic site located in Annapolis County, Nova Scotia.

"There were 10 to 12 households and they all got burned down by the British because of the expulsion of the Acadians," explains Jonah.

By receiving the award, Jonah was also invited to spend a day at Citadel Hill in Halifax.

Their Grade 5 teacher, Tony Eisnor, says the students begin preparing long before the heritage fair in February. Early on, they discuss potential topics, learn how to write an MLA-style bibliography, how to research the Nova Scotia archives and the importance of having a variety of sources.

"They work really hard and I'm really proud of their accomplishments. It's nice when they're able to excel and exceed expectations," says Mr. Eisnor.

The student say a lot of practice went into preparing for the provincial fair.

"I focused on trying to tell a story about my project not just naming the natural facts about William Hall," says Morgan.

"You just talk beside your project and you tell them about it. With the judges I just go with the flow," adds Jonah.

This July, the students will attend the Maritime Regional Heritage Fair in Charlottetown, PEI.

Women focus on compassion in politics, says MLA

WHYNOTTS SETTLEMENT — Women assume a key role on the compassionate side of day-to-day, issue-focused political life, suggests one of the newer Liberal MLAs who's finding joy in a different form of advocacy.

"There's nothing against men in politics," explained Margaret Miller, who represents the riding of Hants East.

"But women seem to look at it with their heart, and deal with their heart, where men are more dealing with it on a business basis or different kind of level. Women just want to help people and do the right thing."

Females make up nearly one-third of the governing party's 33 MLAs.

"We are the heart of the government," she said during her recent speech to an annual meeting of Lunenburg Liberals.

Local MLA Suzanne Lohnes-Croft is among the women in the Liberal caucus but was out of the province on government business and couldn't attend the meeting at the Oakhill fire hall.

Ms Miller knocked off long-time New Democrat MLA and cabinet minister John MacDonnell in the 2013 general election as the McNeil Liberals rolled to a majority government. She's largely recognized for her work with Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), including a three-year tenure as president of the national organization. Her son, a municipal police officer in Cumberland County, died at the hands of a drunk driver 10 years ago, which initiated her involvement with the charitable group.

The 60 year old told the meeting her MADD experience influenced her transition to elected politics.

"I know that I'm making a difference now but it's on a totally different level."

However, Ms Miller didn't sound like a lawmaker poised to run successive campaigns, alluding to the uncertain prospects of running the next time the writ is dropped.

"I'm not in this as a career politician," she said.

"I know don't even know if I'm going to run ...," cutting herself off before concluding, "I have no idea."

Ms Miller serves in the House of Assembly as a deputy speaker and has membership on a few committees, including human resources and the House's management commission.

LCLC recieves new wheelchairs

By REBECCA DINGWELL
rdingwell@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — The Bridgewater & District Rotary Club has provided the Lunenburg County Lifestyle Centre with two new wheelchairs.

Rotary Club President Corey Rogers said they were happy to give the chairs.

“Deputy Mayor Bill McInnis had contacted me, asking if there was any way we could assist the LCLC in providing some wheelchairs,” said Mr. Rogers.

Unbeknowst to the deputy mayor, the club had purchased three new wheelchairs about a year ago. One was given to the DesBrisay Museum.

“We were just holding on to the other two until something else came along,” said Mr. Rogers. “We thought it would be great to provide [those] chairs to the LCLC.”

LCLC staff could not be reached for comment.

The Rotary Club also recently purchased a sand and water table for the Wee Wisdom Nursery School.

Library gets new books

By REBECCA DINGWELL
rdingwell@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER – The Margaret Hennigar Public Library in Bridgewater received a special donation of about $5,000 worth of books from the Adopt-a-Library literacy program on June 3.

“It’s one of many shipments to come,” said Cst. John Kennedy, who founded the program in 1999.

He hopes the new books will encourage children to participate in summer reading.

“It’s a skill,” said Cst. Kennedy. “If they don’t come to the libraries during the summer and take out books to practice their reading... they fall behind.”

There are Adopt-a-Library warehouse locations in Cape Breton and Pictou County. The program works as a “stepping stone” between libraries and community groups to help people learn to love reading.

“Sixty-five percent of inmates in Canadian jails can’t read,” said Cst. Kennedy. “So our goal is to teach our kids to read today to keep them out of jail tomorrow.”

Cst. Kennedy said he tries to get reading material to police officer to give to libraries in order to promote literacy and enhance the program.

Consumers warned of scams

The Better Business Bureau is warning consumers about summer scams.

Fake travel agents and websites are known for advertising too-good-to-be-true deals in the hopes of getting your money in return. Check the Better Business Bureau web site to see if there are any reviews of the company, or Google the phone number or website to see if others report problems.

Summer is also the peak time of year for changing residences. Not all price quotes on line or over the phone are legitimate, and scammers are not likely to send an estimator to your home in advance. Also remember the lowest estimate can sometimes be an unrealistic one which may cost you more in the end.

Before paying for concert tickets on line, make sure the seller is reputable. Fake sellers will often trick consumers into wiring money with no intention of sending real tickets. Be wary of sellers who offer a sad tale as to why they cannot use the tickets, only accept cash, want the money wired or transferred through a prepaid account, and/or pressure you to act quickly.

Be wary of high-pressure door-to-door sales tactics. Many legitimate companies use door-to-door sales. However, many door-to-door salespeople offer deals for everything from driveway paving to air conditioning repair to security systems. Before saying yes, get all promises in writing, including start and finish dates. Never sign a contract that has an open-ended completion date or blank space.

Finding summer employment is a top priority for most college and high school students. Always be wary of employers who require fees for training and background checks, or who advertise jobs with “no experience needed.”

Bridgewater asks for input on council size

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — The Town of Bridgewater will hold a public consultation session this month to discuss the size of its council.

“What’s relevant to us is to hear the community’s input in regards to how many members of council we have. Bridgewater has six councillors plus a mayor. The mayor’s position is excluded from the review,” says strategic initiatives co-ordinator Amy Wamboldt.

The town also want to hear whether the community would like to have a dialogue around how councilors are elected.

“In Bridgewater, our members of council are elected at large, which means it doesn’t matter where you live in the municipality, everybody can run for council. The alternative to that is we could establish wards, which is when you divide your municipality into sections and you say there will be so many councillors elected from each ward,” says Ms Wamboldt.

Members of the public may share their thoughts during the consultation session on June 26 at the Bridgewater fire hall.

Are you concerned about water quality at Bayswater Beach?

Boat builder hopes to raise funds for wounded veterans

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenova.ca

LUNENBURG — Ron Baldwin has experienced many “firsts” of late.

The affable resident of Port Credit, Ontario, spent two weeks in Lunenburg last month with a trio of new-found friends helping to build a 17-foot hand-line dory as part of the Dory Shop’s boat building course.

The program was particularly special to Mr. Baldwin since it not only marked the first time he had ever helped build a boat, but also because he had agreed to purchase it and take it back to Ontario once master boatbuilder Jay Langford applied the finishing touches.

Last week he returned to Lunenburg to pick up his prized possession, then embarked on another first — the launch of what he calls the “One Thin Dime” campaign.

“It’s in support of Wounded Warriors Canada, a non-profit organization that helps Canadian Forces members, be they full time or reservists, who have been wounded or injured in their service to Canada,” he explained.

Although he never served in the military, Mr. Baldwin is a former police officer and both his parents served in the Canadian Forces during the Second World War - his mother in the Canadian Women’s Army Corps and his father on the corvette HMCS Huntsville.

He kicked off his fundraising campaign in Lunenburg with the assistance of Bluenose II Capt. Phil Watson, who presented him with the ceremonial “first dime.”

Mr. Baldwin later left for home with his new dory - which he has named Erika in honour of his wife - in tow, with a planned stop at Saint John, New Brunswick to visit his 89-year-old father.

He hopes to collect funds in support of Wounded Warriors Canada along the way back to Ontario.

Mr. Baldwin said he became somewhat smitten with Lunenburg and its seafaring history during his two-week stay.

“I’ll be back, that’s for sure,” he laughed, adding next year he plans on returning for another boat-building course at the Dory Shop.

Public warned to beware of algae blooms

The Department of Health and Wellness is warning Nova Scotians to watch out for blue-green algae blooms in lakes and rivers.

“While the risk to health is fairly low, people should avoid contact with algae blooms and the water where they occur until the bloom has dissipated,” said Gary O’Toole, director of environmental health, in a release.

“If you come in contact with a bloom and develop symptoms that persist for a few days, you should consult a physician.”

Many types of blue-green algae are harmless, but some can produce toxins that pose a health risk to people and animals.

Also known as pond scum, the algae can be spotted by its blueish green, grassy or soupy appearance and sometimes gives off a distinct odour. It can naturally form on any lake or river in the right conditions.

People should not swim in, drink from, or eat fish from water sources where blue-green algae is present. Water contaminated by the algae should not be used to prepare or cook food, and boiling the water will not eliminate the toxins.

If water containing the algae is swallowed, symptoms may include stomach ache, diarrhea, vomiting and nausea. Direct contact with skin from swimming may cause skin, nose, throat or eye irritations.

Nova Scotians who suspect they see an algae bloom can call and report it to their local Department of Environment office.

Noted human rights activist visits Lunenburg

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenw.ca

LUNENBURG — Dr. Jan Knippers Black's interest in the welfare of her fellow man goes back over five decades.

The noted American author and human rights activist, who was recently in Lunenburg visiting family, traces her passion for freedom, fairness and social justice back to her participation in the first class of Peace Corps volunteers, which was formed in 1962.

Jan Knippers Black was among the first class of Peace Corps volunteers in 1962 and has had a decorated career in human rights activism.

sounded right until we got there and realized that we didn't know how to fish and they did."

Because of her artistic credentials, Dr. Black was assigned to illustrate a magazine for farmers in the central valley of the country.

"Pretty early on I began to wonder if the people putting out this magazine had any idea how the farmers used it — what they felt they might need to know from it," she recalled.

"So I asked for permission to get on a bike and go all over the central valley on a bicycle to see if I could find out how this magazine is actually being used. When I got back I suggested that they put it on softer paper, at which point my assignment

"For minorities rights and women's rights, growing up when I did as a woman in the South, you know you are already sort of on the outside looking in," she explained. "That's part of a perspective that helps to steer you in that direction."

Dr. Black said following a first career in music her interests had switched to art when she heard about the Peace Corps.

"We went down to Chile with what we thought was the wonderfully idealistic point of view that you don't give a man a fish, you teach him to fish," she said. "That was the way people explained community development in those years. That was changed. I started to work in shanty towns around Santiago."

That early exposure left Dr. Black with a passion for Latin America countries, particularly Chile, as she embarked on an international career which has included experience such as senior associate membership at St. Antony's College, Oxford University; and Fulbright, Mellon and other grants and Fellowships in South America, the Caribbean, and India.

Dr. Black has also held on-site and short-term teaching and honorary faculty positions in several Latin American venues and has lectured and done research extensively overseas.

She has served as research professor in the Division of Public Administration, University of New Mexico, and as editor and research administrator in the American University's Foreign Area Studies Division.

Despite Dr. Black's busy schedule, she has still found time to edit and co-author three books, co-author 14 others and publish over 200 chapters or articles in reference books, anthologies, journals, magazines and newspapers.

She was elected to the board of directors of Amnesty International back in 2011.

Dr. Black says her work with Amnesty is primarily of a governance nature, part of which was the recent appointment of a new executive director which she and the rest of the board are excited about.

"One of the things that I was hoping we could do with this choice of a new director is to redirect more of our attention back to the United States," she said. "In so many ways we have been back-sliding, setting bad precedents in respects to our human rights protection at home."

Chester council considers re-zoning request

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenw.ca

CHESTER — Chester Municipal Council has asked staff to investigate the viability of rezoning a North Street property back to its former commercial status from residential.

Suzanne Young had made a request regarding 3976 North Street, one of several properties which was shifted from being zoned highway commercial to medium density residential when amendments were made to the land use by-law and municipal planning strategy during the Highway 3 streetscape plan review in 2010-11.

"I ask that you undo what I hope was an innocent oversight in your communication from the planning and zoning officials regarding the change of use of my property," she told a recent meeting of council. "The real question here is why myself and other affected property owners were not directly contacted by mail, or otherwise about serious impending changes to the property that I own and paid taxes on for many years."

Ms Young said she discovered the change had been made after she listed the property for sale and it was investigated by a potential buyer.

She said because of the re-zoning, it is now worth "a fraction of its commercial value" and "will be difficult to sell to anyone except to the abutting property owner and its appeal as a residential property would be highly suspect.

"Had I been notified of this impending decision I, like any one of you here, would have vigorously opposed it and made known that, yet again, Chester zoning cannot be relied on to protect the property owners, but rather is at the mercy of the next pressure group to change," she said.

"Please undo what is done. The axiom about certain roads being paved with good intentions seems applicable here, and I believe if you apply any sense of fairness to this issue, you will see that there is a wrong here that must be righted."

At the suggestion of Warden Allen Webber, council passed a motion to have staff look at what it would mean to the owner in terms of the property's usefulness if it were re-zoned back to commercial under the new Streetscape regulations.

"It would probably be useful to all of us," he said. "If I were them, I'd want to know."

Public asked to report bat sightings

If you see a bat, the Department of Natural Resources is asking you to report it.

White-nose syndrome, a fatal infection caused by a cold-climate fungus, has killed millions of bats throughout north-eastern North America in just a few years.

After a 95 per cent decline at five mainland winter hibernation sites, the government designated the little brown Myotis, the northern Myotis and the tri-coloured bat under the Nova Scotia Endangered Species Act last year.

Nova Scotians can report bat sightings at www.batconservation.ca or by calling 1-866-727-3447. In 2013, more than 1,000 bat sightings were reported to the website and hotline, which are hosted by the Mersey Tobetic Research Institute.

"This year, we are also asking the public to help us monitor roosting sites, where bats congregate to birth and raise their young," said Mersey Tobetic Research Institute wildlife biologist Brad Toms.

"People who reported roosting sites, either this year or last, are being asked to monitor those sites twice this year, once in July and once in August. It will only take about an hour, from just before sunset to just after dark."

Chester increases planning committee size

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenov.ca

CHESTER — Chester Municipal Council has made a change to a policy which increases the number of people who can serve on the planning advisory committee (PAC).

Previously, PAC consisted of two members of council representing districts affected by the Chester Village area secondary planning strategy, Warden Allan Webber, three members of the general public appointed by council who live in the area, and one member nominated by the commissioners for the Village of Chester.

Following the change in policy, general public representation has been increased to four appointees, bringing the total number on the committee to eight.

Warden Webber said there was sufficient interest from the public to warrant the addition of another member.

"We added the extra person last time and we just wanted to make what was taking place in reality consistent with policy."

Mural, mural on the wall

Artist spruces up day care, highlights town's past, present

History is dotted with walls that have gained fame for one reason or another.

There is the Great Wall of China, the Berlin Wall, the Wailing Wall and even the left field wall in fabled Fenway Park in Boston — affectionately known as the Green Monster — all famous in their own right.

Now, you may want to add one more to the list — the wall of the Lunenburg Day Care Centre.

For pretty much all of its existence, the west-facing wall of the building was virtually blocked from public view by the old Esso service station which stood next door.

That all changed when Wilson's Fuels purchased the service station property a few years ago and demolished it to make way for a new combination Esso retail outlet and Burger King restaurant, which included a drive-through lane between the two buildings.

That change made the wall of the day care, which was awash in a mundane monotone colour, clearly visible to passers-by, a situation the folks at Wilson's Fuels thought should be brightened up.

"Roger Phinney from Wilson's Fuels contacted me several months ago to propose a mural on the side of the building to make the drive-through more pleasurable for their customers and also to enhance our building," explains Patricia Randall, executive director at the day care.

"After several months of working it out, Peter Matyas was contacted by me, and then by Roger, to create this beautiful mural of the Town of Lunenburg and to depict various aspects, both historically and present, of the town and also of the children of the day care."

Mr. Matyas, who has been acclaimed for his work as both a muralist and a portrait artist, enthusiastically took on the task of melding Lunenburg's past and present visually.

"As Patricia approached me on this — and Roger, on behalf of the service station — they wanted to reflect on what could be seen and done for people coming to visit the Town of Lunenburg and to enhance community support and a community feeling, and of course the day-care centre here, with the kids and the activities with the kids," Mr. Matyas says.

"This is our future generation, so we're celebrating Lunenburg and all its attributes that people can celebrate ... past, present and future. It's multicultural and inter-generational."

A close look at the mural reveals Mr. Matyas' whimsical side and the numerous "hidden treasures" he included in the work.

The mural would not be complete without the images of children doing what kids do best - having fun.

"We're celebrating Lunenburg and all its attributes that people can celebrate."

Man named remarkable senior for outstanding generosity

89 year old one of three Nova Scotians honoured

By PAULA LEVY
plevy@southshorenov.ca

Mahone Bay resident George Silver spends most of his time tending his large vegetable gardens, but on June 14, he put away his gardening tools to receive a remarkable seniors' award at the 50-plus expo in Halifax.

Mr. Silver was one of three Nova Scotian seniors recognized with the honour for making their communities better through leadership, volunteerism and community service work.

Nominated by his daughter Maryann Millett of Chester Grant, Mr. Silver knew nothing of the attempt to have him acknowledged for his generosity until he received a notification letter last month from the Nova Scotia Department of Seniors.

"He's a very intelligent man and very remarkable individual," said Ms Millett. "Anyone who knows him marvels at his intelligence because he can do just about anything. ... He's devoted his whole life to others. We're so grateful for that."

At the event on Saturday, Mr. Silver was heralded as an enthusiastic volunteer, a generous neighbour and an expert in technical matters.

His know-how comes from a lifetime of hard work. He has worked as a boat builder, high-pressure welder, marine engineer, marine fitter, carpenter and industrial mechanic at Michelin. With such a strong technical background, he is always available to offer a solution to a problem and to pass along his knowledge to help his friends.

At 89 years old, Mr. Silver regularly volunteers with the local food bank and church preparing meals, baking cookies and pies and washing dishes. In addition to serving as a trustee for the United Church in Mahone Bay, he spends countless hours in his garden. However, most of what he reaps, he generously gives to friends, neighbours and family members.

Mahone Bay resident George Silver, 89, was one of three Nova Scotians to receive a remarkable senior award at the 50-plus expo in Halifax on June 14.

Just because Mr. Silver is approaching 90, doesn't mean he is beginning to shy away from physical labour. However, his five children have put a stop to him fixing his own roof.

"I have a patch of roof that needs fixing," he explained, noting he is unsure why his children are so concerned about him climbing on the roof. His wife of 62 years, Joan, said although he won't listen to her warnings, he does heed his children's advice.

The jovial Mr. Silver is a little uneasy about the attention he is receiving over the award since he's not accustomed to public accolades, but those who know him know he is definitely a remarkable senior.

"He's not only a remarkable senior," added Ms Millett.

"He is and has been a very remarkable man."

Hops farm taking root

Microbreweries interested in crop

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenow.ca

Andrew Tanner hopes things will soon get hopping with his latest initiative.

That's because the Bridgewater Councillor recently finished converting a Dayspring property he purchased seven years ago into a hops field.

"I've been toying around with the idea of doing a micro-brewery, and as a result of some reading and so on, I thought I would start out smaller with hops," Mr. Tanner explained. "I think honestly it was the Ivany Report that kind of just spurred me on to truly do it and become a little entrepreneurial."

When he bought the property, his original plan was to move its existing home further on the hill so it would have a view of the LaHave River.

"But after we got into the house, [we learned] it was just decrepit with a lot of rot and we couldn't do anything with it, so we brought it down."

The land laid barren until a few weeks ago, when Mr. Tanner finally put his hop-growing plans into action.

"It's like grapes," he said of the cultivation process. "They have a very deep root system, but they also need to grow very, very high. So the poles they grow on are about 10 to 12 feet out of the ground. Then they'll grow along this trellis system that we have going with airline cable."

At harvest time in mid-August to mid-September, depending on the growing season conditions, the lines which lead down to the ground will be cut and the hops picked.

Mr. Tanner says he's been spending a lot of weekends on his new pastime, as well as some time during the week, keeping an eye on how his fledgling plants are progressing.

"The latest thing I did last Sunday was start to tie the ropes from the trellises and the airline cables down to the ground so that the hops can grow up it and attach itself to it," he said.

"I had a small supply of stakes and I'm going to pick up more and I'll start along at that process. Some of the hops are probably about a foot off the ground already, which is great."

Once the hops reach their maturity, he expects to have no problem selling them.

In fact, Mr. Tanner said whatever his field is able to yield this summer has already been spoken for.

"Micro-breweries in Nova Scotia compete with the big breweries for hops," he explained.

"They end up getting leftovers and are always scrambling, so any time they can find a hop grower locally that can supply them with fresh hops, they're all over that. Both Hell's Bay and Boxing Rock in Shelburne have expressed an interest in anything I can grow."

Online genealogy courses

We live in a visual world. Many of us still read to learn new things, but a great number of people now watch to gather information and to learn new skills. Videos are popping up across the internet to assist individuals who want to acquire an ability to enrich their lives in one way or another.

Countless videos on every topic imaginable can be enjoyed comfortably from home for little or no fee. The subject of genealogy is no exception. Although there are many on-line locations, one of the better series to help genealogists is found at the learning centre on the FamilySearch website.

The website contains hundreds of free on-line courses researchers can take advantage of at any hour of the day. Included in the educational resources are 304 videos and 253 video and slide presentations. Sixty-two courses are available in audio only and seventy-five use interactive slides to present information.

Visitors can pick and choose which courses they wish to complete. FamilySearch has broken down the topics in various categories to help researchers find the courses which best suit their needs.

Researchers wanting to learn about how to find records in specific countries can choose their location of interest. The digit noted next to the place name indicates the number of courses available for that particular location. For example, there are 25 for England, nine for France and 16 for Germany.

The list of places is not limited to countries. England and Scotland are listed along with the United Kingdom, and Pennsylvania is noted as well as the United States. The America-Europe course category provides instructions on how to find information on ancestors who "crossed the pond." In other words, immigration records for people who voyaged across the Atlantic Ocean to settle in North America.

Researchers can view courses by subject matter. Birth, marriage and death, census, taxation and voter, reference materials and finding aids are just a few of the subjects available.

Different languages were taken into consideration when FamilySearch developed these on-line courses. Lessons are available in more than a dozen languages, including Italian, Spanish and French.

Skill levels are presented as beginner, intermediate and advanced. The home page contains a list of beginner genealogy courses, a series of training videos "designed to help you quickly discover your family history." All are five minutes in length. They are geared towards helping the rookie begin their research in an organised fashion and avoid mistakes others new to the hobby have made. Organizing and citing sources are only two of the many pitfalls that plague beginners when they tackle their family trees.

The most popular courses, such as "If I'd Only Known! Beginner Genealogy Mistakes," and new courses, such as "Using the Dutch Website: Whowaswho," are noted on the home page.

The large selection of courses on the site vary in length. Some are a mere minute-and-a-half long, but others are an hour or more. Videos can be paused or stopped at any time and returned to later. Courses can be shared on Facebook and Twitter, as well as e-mailed to someone who may also find the information interesting.

Locating the sora rail

I recently made a trip to the Belleisle Marsh to see if I could locate a sora rail this year and was pleased to hear six and to see three.

This bird is not an easy one to find in Nova Scotia. They are on Tancook Island, Roberts Island in Yarmouth County and at the Amherst Point Bird Sanctuary. They can also be found at Miner's Marsh in Kentville. Other locations for this bird in the province are few and far between. However, they are considered the most common of the rails in North America. The sora rail summers from Canada south to Baja, California and the southwest United States and to Oklahoma, Ohio and West Virginia. They winter from California, Arizona and Texas to Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Florida, and also further south through Mexico, Central America and the West Indies to Peru, Venezuela, Trinidad and Guyana.

The sora rail is small and plump, gray-brown and eight to 10 inches long. The wing-spread is 12 to 14-and-a-half inches. It is distinguished by a short, yellow, chicken-like bill. The adults have a black patch on the face and throat, and the back and wings are spotted with black and buff. Below there is irregular thin barring of thin white lines on gray.

They nest in dense growths of cattails and reeds in small freshwater marshes, bogs or bits of marsh along rivers or ponds. They will eat small mollusks and aquatic insects but 73 per cent of their diet is seeds. There are a variety of other names given to this species, such as Carolina crake, Carolina rail, chicken-bill, chicken-billed rail, common rail, little American water hen, meadow chicken, mud hen, ortolan, railbird and of course it's official name, sora rail.

Mandy Eisenhauer reported two red-tailed hawks flying together and calling back and forth to one another at Rhodes Corner. Mandy also saw two young American robins which had successfully fledged from the nest. At Chester Basin, the daughter-in-law of Brenda Hiltz had a song sparrow rapping at her window, likely defending its territory from what the sparrow thought was an intruder, but was his own reflection. Another anonymous person sent me photos of a hairy woodpecker banging at the glass of a patio door. On Tancook Island, Hillary Dionne photographed a yellow-billed cuckoo. This bird is only seen here as a migrant. The black-billed cuckoo does nest in Nova Scotia, but I've only seen three in all of my years of birding. The yellow-billed cuckoo is a different story altogether. I've probably seen over 1,000 of them.

JAMES HIRTLE

An adult northern gannet and two-first year birds were seen diving off of West Head at Lockport, Shelburne County by Jane Alexander. Jane also reported a great-crested flycatcher in the woods at West Head. I was surprised to see a turkey near the Mt. Merritt Road, which is fairly close to Albany. This bird was not handy to any houses, so was likely an illegally-released bird or an escapee. Pat Gladman and I had great looks at a swamp sparrow along the French Basin Trail in Annapolis Royal. This is a wonderful location with lots of waterfowl. We visited there on June 7. There were black ducks with young, gadwalls with young, mallards with young, Canada geese with goslings and a female wood duck with 16 little ones in tow. Thirty-two species of birds were recorded on that visit. It did my heart good to see a number of cliff swallows and two bank swallows feeding over the marsh. These two species have not been common this year.

New coin marks 100th anniversary of Canadian tragedy Lunenburg painter's work honours sinking of the Empress of Ireland

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenov.ca

The Royal Canadian Mint has released their latest coin, the tenth designed by internationally noted Canadian marine artist Yves Berube.

The Lunenburg painter was commissioned by the mint to create a 50-cent piece to mark the 100th anniversary of the sinking of the steamship Empress of Ireland on May 29, 1914.

According to the mint's website, the vessel, which was built in Scotland by Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Company and launched in 1906, was widely regarded at the time as being the fastest and most comfortable passenger ship for transatlantic travel between Canada and the United Kingdom.

It had departed Quebec on May 28 for its first voyage of the summer season to Liverpool, England, and was steaming down the St. Lawrence River early the following morning when tragedy struck near Pointe-au-Pere.

Around 1:40 a.m., the Norwegian coal carrier Sorstad was sighted about eight miles away and personnel on both ships tried to anticipate each other's course.

Thick fog, however, encompassed both vessels, forcing Captain Henry George Kendall to bring the Empress to a full stop.

Minutes later, the Sorstad emerged from the mist just 50 metres from the Empress, too late to stop or alter course.

At 1:55 a.m. the Norwegian vessel rammed it's reinforced hull into the side of the steamship, severely damaging its compartments, which rapidly began filling with water.

The Empress quickly developed a starboard list, allowing water to pour in through the portholes and rendering it impossible to close most of it's watertight doors, trapping passengers inside their cabins.

Only a handful of lifeboats could be launched before the vessel turned completely on its side.

In just 14 minutes from the time of impact, the Empress of Ireland had sunk to its final resting place.

Of the 1,477 passengers on board, 1,012 perished, 134 of which were children, making the disaster the worst shipwreck in Canadian history and the second worst in the world during peacetime, behind the Titanic.

The 50-cent coin, of which just 15,000 were minted, depicts Mr. Berube's artistic impression of the Empress' final moments leading up to the collision.

Canada Post purchased 6,000 of the coins and combined them with a commemorative stamp and book in memory of the disaster.

"I made a painting and they have a new technology where they can put a really high quality reproduction of the painting on the coin," Mr. Berube explains. "Canada Post did the same thing with the commemorative book's cover."

A second coin commemorating the event was designed by British Columbian artist John Orton and was unveiled at the same time as Mr. Berube's work.

"They have a new technology where they can put a really high quality reproduction of the painting on the coin."

Famous ship has Chester connection

“Liverpool Packet” model being christened

A replica of a Nova Scotian schooner with a Chester connection which gained considerable notoriety during the War of 1812 is being launched and christened at the Queens County Museum in Liverpool on June 21.

The Liverpool Packet, was known as “the scourge of the New England coast,” was a privateer that patrolled the Atlantic coast.

During her heyday she was given four letters of Marque — which separated the ship, owners and crew from piracy — and had 50 captures, 33 while the vessel was under the command of Capt.

Joseph Barss Jr.

“The original owners of the Liverpool Packet purchased her for the sum of £420 and during the war she brought in upwards of a million dollars in prizes,” says George Mitchell, chairman of the museum board.

Curator Linda Rafuse says the model of the vessel came about as a result of the museum learning of Heritage Canada’s 2012 initiative to recognize this special period in Canadian History.

“Heritage Canada requested interested parties to review this list to see if they recognized anyone that may have had a connection with the War of 1812,” she says. “It was immediately apparent that Liverpool [has] a very direct and deep connection through the famous Privateer schooner Liverpool Packet and her best known skipper, Capt. Joseph Barss Jr., whose home is still standing.”

Mr. Mitchell says the War of 1812 “is a signal event in the evolution of British North America and the Canadian nation.

“By having this model of the Liverpool Packet constructed was a way to have the critical role that this vessel performed [recognized].”

The exhibit measures 34 feet in length with a beam of 17 feet. It’s approximately two-thirds the size of the original ship.

The exhibit is based entirely on a scale

CULTURE, CUISINE & COMMUNITY*Ways to enjoy fresh strawberries*

Based on the looks of the strawberry patch in my garden, I'd say that we're in for a bumper crop this year at local farm markets, farmers' markets and u-picks. Strawberries freeze so well that they're easy to save for any time of the year, so don't be afraid to stock up if you run into a good price. That said, here are a few ways to enjoy your fresh strawberries right away:

Strawberry Patch Candy

If you have a food dehydrator, this is a ridiculously delicious way to preserve your berries. Citric acid is sold in most places that sell specialty baking supplies — I get mine at Bulk Barn.

Ingredients

- 2 teaspoons citric acid
- 2 tablespoons sugar or to taste
- 6 cups fresh sliced strawberries

Directions

Whisk together citric acid and sugar in a shallow bowl. Add strawberry slices and toss so that pieces are evenly covered. Dehydrate at 135°F until strawberries are dry, about 18 hours.

Strawberry Almond Bowl

If you can harvest a few of the tiny, wild berries that pop up in lawns and next to trails to add to this salad, they add interest and beauty to this dish. Serve for dessert or over oatmeal.

Ingredients

- 1 cup sliced almonds
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 ½ pints sliced strawberries, plus a handful of wild berries if available

Directions

Preheat the oven to 350°F.

In a mixing bowl, combine sliced almonds, honey, and lemon juice. Spread on a baking sheet and bake for twelve minutes or until the nuts are slightly browned and fragrant, stirring once.

Toss warm almonds with strawberries in a mixing bowl. Serve immediately or chill in the refrigerator to serve later.

Strawberry Gelatin

This lovely gelatin makes the store bought version hang its head in shame.

Ingredients

- 1 quart white grape juice, divided
- 4 packets unflavoured gelatin
- 3 cups chopped strawberries

Directions

Combine ½ cup of grape juice with gelatin in a small bowl and set aside. Heat remaining juice in a saucepan over medium low heat for five minutes. Add softened gelatin and stir to combine. Add strawberry chunks, stir, and remove from heat. Pour into a clear serving dish and refrigerate, uncovered, for 30 minutes, then cover and refrigerate another 3 hours. Serve plain or with whipped cream.

Strawberry Vinegar

Use this vinegar on your spring greens or even drizzle it on your ice cream.

Directions

- 3 cups sliced strawberries
- 2 cups white balsamic vinegar

Ingredients

Combine strawberries and vinegar in a mixing bowl and mix with a wooden spoon, mashing berry slices against the side of the bowl as you stir. Let stand 1 hour. Strain through a fine sieve or cheesecloth. Bottle vinegar and refrigerate. Use within a week.

Advice for plants that don't require a lot of water

Over the past few years, heat waves seem to be occurring more and more frequently in some areas. The suitability of many plants is being severely tested because of these changing weather patterns. When they are just barely surviving, they no longer add to the beauty of a backyard. If they are not drought-brown, then their foliage is sparse and unattractive. That is because in hot, dry conditions, plant leaves grow much more slowly, or even stop growing completely, and very few flowers develop.

Many gardeners become discouraged when they have to contend with chaotic weather conditions at different times of the year. Fortunately, however, garden centres are adapting their stock to the new weather patterns and are able to suggest plants that require very little water.

To create sustainable flower beds, choose plants that are more resistant to long, hot, sunny days, wind, and drought. But don't forget — no plant can grow without water!

To help you become a savvy gardener, here are a few suggestions for plants that can tolerate drought conditions.

- Annuals: begonias, gaura, lantana, geranium (Pelargonium), and purpletop verbena (Verbena bonariensis).
- Perennials: yarrow, coreopsis, iris, lavender, Russian sage (Perovskia), cinquefoil, scabiosa, hens and chicks (Sempervivum), and yucca.
- Grasses: fescue (Festuca), pearl millet (Pennisetum glaucum), and blue oat grass (Helictotrichon sempervirens).
- Shrubs: Red barberry (Berberis thunbergii), buddleia (Buddleja davidii), euonymus, physocarpus, Japanese rose (Rosa rugosa), spirea, and weigela.
- Trees: Amur maple (Acer ginnala), serviceberry, red oak (Quercus rubra), and Japanese tree lilac (Syringa reticulata).
- Evergreens: juniper, Russian arborvitae (Microbiota decussata), Colorado spruce (Picea pungens), and pine (Pinus).

The wonderful world of grasses

Long neglected by gardeners, ornamental grasses are increasingly popular.

Landscaping specialists are unanimous in their opinion — ornamental grasses give yards a look of freedom and have an incomparable ability to play with natural light. Grasses bring a touch of lightness to landscapes with their gracious waving lines, and they contrast so wonderfully with other plants. They are also appreciated for the beauty of their flower heads and their overall look. There is no doubt that grasses are at their best in natural landscapes. However, they also lend themselves to many other types of settings. For example, you can plant them close to any colourful annuals as well as rose bushes. They will show each other off to advantage.

Grasses remain spectacular right through the winter as well, so don't make the mistake of cutting them back in the fall. They'll be one of the wonders of your winter landscape, looking particularly splendid when covered in frost. So be sure to wait until the spring before pruning them.

Grasses sold in pots at garden centres can be planted throughout the summer season. Don't forget to respect spacing requirements, as some varieties need a lot of room. Most species like to be divided every three or four years and are much more vigorous as a result. Ornamental grasses are generally easy to grow. Most species prefer full sun and adapt to nearly all types of soil; very few species are shade tolerant.

Lumberjacks make ten trades on draft day

Club picks five players in first three rounds

By LUKE KENNY

lkenny@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER - The Bridgewater CIBC Wood Gundy Lumberjacks made ten trades in an action-packed day at the Maritime Hockey League Entry Draft in Summerside on June 14.

After the smoke cleared, the team had five selections in the first three rounds, including the second overall pick.

"We got who we wanted," said general manager Ken Petrie.

"There were two we were looking at for the first pick. We chose one and the other wasn't taken after the first round, so we got him with our first pick in the second round. It worked well."

With the second overall pick, the Lumberjacks chose Halifax McDonalds forward Dillon Boucher, who posted 16 goals and 22 assists in 34 regular season games last season.

Mr. Boucher's team competed in the Telus Cup National Midget Championship and he was a 7th-round pick of the Cape Breton Screaming Eagles in the 2013 QMJHL Entry Draft.

In the second round, the Lumberjacks drafted blueliner Daniel Little, also of the Halifax McDonald's, with the 14th overall pick and Christopher Goreham of the South Shore Mustangs at No. 17 overall.

"Dylan Boucher is a high-scoring forward and David Little is a good puck-moving, offensive-minded defenceman, and good on power plays. I can see both of them fitting into our lineup this year," said Mr. Petrie, adding Mr. Goreham only played five games in one year of midget eligibility and may need some time to grow and gain experience.

"We drafted for the future...but [Goreham] will play Junior 'A' hockey and he will be a great help to us."

Connor Peveril, Morgan Barron and Halifax Mooseheads draft pick Morgan Nauss were all taken in the third round.

"Morgan Nauss, if he doesn't make the Q, would be a bonus for us, no ifs, ands or buts about it," said the general manager.

"The others, in most cases, are a year down the road. Some of our draft picks from last year are now ready to play this year."

In one of their ten trades of the day, Kevin Poirier, along with future considerations, was traded to Pictou for Mikhail Parker and future considerations.

"Mikhail Parker will no doubt play for us this year," said Mr. Petrie.

Bridgewater also traded Connor Hilton, a 5th-round pick in the 2014 draft and a 6th-round pick in 2015 to Campbellton for a 4th-round pick in the 2014 draft, a 10th-round pick next year and and future considerations.

Earlier in the week, the Lumberjacks selected Bridgewater's Keith Getson and Hebbville's Mitchell Baker as their territorial picks.

Both players spent last season with the South Shore Mustangs, and Mr. Getson was drafted by the Charlottetown Islanders in the 2014 QMJHL Entry Draft.

"The Lumberjacks are extremely pleased to be able to add quality players like Keith and Mitchell to our ranks. Both players are coming off exceptional seasons with the Mustangs and we are excited to add these two players from the local community. We look forward to seeing both players in a Lumberjack uniform as we move forward," said Lumberjacks' head scout Kevin Mitchell.

The team is more confident heading into next season after the success they had at the draft, Mr. Petrie said.

"We're always looking a year ahead. It's taken us awhile and we paid the price last year, but we're really solid."

Fleet hosting international championships

One Design event scheduled for August

By LUKE KENNY

lkenny@southshorenov.ca

CHESTER - The Chester Yacht Club and International One Design (IOD) fleet will host the 2014 International One-Design North American Championship from August 29-31.

The championship brings teams from San Francisco, Bermuda, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Nova Scotia and Maine to sail the Chester IOD fleet yachts in Mahone Bay.

This year marks the first time that the championship has been held in Canada.

"Everyone here is excited about putting on the regatta. We have had tremendous support from local and international sponsors and volunteers to make the event happen," fleet chairman and spokesman Rick Thompson said.

"I hope people take advantage over that holiday weekend to come out and watch the racing. Our thanks also to the Chester Yacht Club for hosting the event."

The IOD Class was conceived in 1936 by Corny Shields in New York to build, maintain and race a fleet of "One-Design yachts, distinctive in appearance and performance, using one-design racing, especially to develop the competitive capacities of both helmsmen and crews under the fairest and most equal conditions."

With 12 fleets in five countries and over 150 yachts actively racing, International One Design was the first class to be recognized by International Sailing Federation as a "classic" One Design class.

The Chester IOD Fleet started in 2005 and the IOD World Class Association official recognition of the Chester fleet was granted in 2009.

The Chester IOD Fleet and the Chester Yacht Club will host the 2014 International One-Design North American Championship from August 29-31.

Chester Race Week is North America's second-largest annual race week based on number of competing boats and has been named one of Sailing World magazine's 14 greatest sailing events in North America.

Chester Race Week registration opens

By LUKE KENNY
lkenny@southshorenov.ca

The race is on. Chester Race Week has officially issued its notice of race to open registration for the annual Chester Yacht Club event. This year's August 13 to 16 race features a course for every skill level and boat class, daily events with live music, food, and the return of racing seminars from famed J/Boat designer, cofounder and sailor Rodney Johnstone. "Recreational sailors and hardcore, competitive racers alike love Chester Race Week because we have diverse courses in a beautiful setting, and the results are so unpredictable — we strive to make racing competitive and fun," said 2014 principal race officer Elizabeth Shaw in a release. Named one of Sailing World magazine's 14 greatest sailing events in North America, each August 1,200 plus sailors arrive in Mahone Bay to compete. Chester Race Week is North America's second-largest annual race week based on number of competing boats, behind South Carolina's Charleston Race Week. "We don't finalize course designs until race day when we know the actual conditions and have confirmed our competitors' interests," said Ms. Shaw. "We are constantly talking to our competitors so we can produce the kind of competitive courses our sailors want to race." Chester Race Week has invested in Yacht Scoring, a web based, race management and scoring system used by some of the competitive sailing world's top organizations. The benefits of the system include realtime on-line scoring and communication with skippers and crews before, during and after each race via email notice. However, official notices will continue to come from race committee boats via traditional flag and horn signals. "This year each skipper, crew member and family member on shore will be able to get their boat's exact finish time and ranking via their smart phone before the start of the next race. It'll be hours faster and more accurate than it used to be," said Ms. Shaw. "If we have to delay a start due to wind or weather, the race committee boat will still communicate changes to the fleet with traditional signal flags, but skippers and tacticians are going to love the convenience and speed of the new Yacht Scoring email notices delivering the same updates, faster." The public are welcome to watch the races from the dock or from inside the Chester Yacht Club. Visit www.ChesterRaceWeek.com for race and social-event schedules.

Two mixed-league teams remain unbeaten

The top three teams in the Bridgewater and Area Mixed Softball League ran the table in June 13 play at the MARC, meaning the status quo remains in league standings — for now. The Bridgewater River Pub Alers stayed in first place and moved to 12-0 by sweeping two games with O'Regan's Subaru. The wins included a walk-off grand slam in the second game, allowing the Alers to overcome a 9-6 last-at-bat deficit. Parsons Construction also stayed undefeated at 10-0 by taking two games from the Bushwacker Renegades, while the BMI Freaks ran their winning streak to eight games (9-3), taking two from Bridgewater Insurance. In Mahone Bay, the Orange Crush swept aside Charlie's Pizza and, at LaHave Street Field, the Misfits scored two big wins against Oickle's Enviro Depot. The River Pub Alers, Parsons Construction and the BMI Freaks sit one through three, respectively, atop the standings through the sixth week of play. The Northfield Gunners, who had a bye week, are in fourth place (6-3-1), five points back of BMI. Orange Crush is in fifth (12 points), followed by O'Regan's (8); Charlie's Pizza, the Misfits, and Oickle's Enviro Depot (six points each); the Bushwacker Renegades (five); and Bridgewater Insurance (two). This coming Friday night, two of the top-three teams will collide when the River Pub Alers visit with the BMI Freaks at LaHave Street Field. Another anticipated contest in Mahone Bay will see Parsons Construction try to keep their perfect season intact against Northfield. At the MARC in Dayspring, field one will feature the Bushwacker Renegades and Orange Crush matching up; field two will see O'Regan's take on Oickle's Enviro Depot; and field three will pit the Misfits against Charlie's Pizza. Bridgewater Insurance will enjoy their first bye week of 2014.

Cyclists compete in New Brunswick

With a break in the Nova Scotia road-racing calendar, four members of the O'Regan's Subaru cycling team traveled to compete in the Tour de Force in Saint-Paul, New Brunswick on June 8. In it's second year, the Tour de Force added a morning 23.6-km individual time trial to their afternoon road race. Scores in the time trial and road race combined for a general classification position. Mitchell MacDonald and Shane Eno competed in the Category-A event. Mr. MacDonald was well positioned after the time trial and was able to make the final selection on the second-last lap of the 125-km race. Mr. MacDonald would take the final sprint from this small group for the stage win, finishing fourth in the overall general classification. Mr. Eno finished in 15th overall. In the B-Category event, Colin Ward placed third in the time trial and took second place in the 92-km afternoon road race, putting him in second overall. In the C-Category event, Rod Rawding finished second in the 69-km road race and third on the overall general classification. O'Regan's Subaru Cycling will host the Nova Scotia provincial time trial championship race on the Lower Branch Road on June 22.

Service learning projects showcased

BHS students creating green space

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenova.ca

BRIDGEWATER — Equipped with shovels, rakes and bricks, students at Bridgewater Junior Senior High School are taking their work outside of the classroom.

“We’ve dug up the ground [and] we’ve put cement blocks down around the gazebo,” says Grade 10 student Brandon Stockley, who is part of the school’s Options and Opportunities (O2) program.

Students in the program from Grade 10 to 12 are part of the multi-phased project which aims to create a lasting green space in the school’s backyard.

“I enjoy working with the air force engineers to make our school look like a better and more positive place to be,” says Mr. Stockley.

The O2 program partners with community organizations to help students get hands-on learning experience while they’re in high school. This year, the students have been working with the 14 Construction Engineering Squadron to refurbish the backyard space.

“It’s been good working with the kids, they’re hard workers,” says Master Corporal Rodney Whynot, who has been helping the students install new walkways and make the area wheelchair accessible.

“The kids are getting a lot of hands-on and professional experience and we get to pass on that knowledge and experience.”

As part of the O2 program, Service Learning Projects such as this one were showcased at schools across the province from June 2 to 6. More than 2,300 students in Nova Scotia take part in O2.

Other Lunenburg County high schools — including Forest Heights Community

School, Park View Education Centre and New Germany Rural High School — also showcased various Service Learning Projects during the week.

“It’s really about getting the kids experience with practical applications of all of the things that they use in the school and giving back to their wider school and community,” says Jane Berrigan, lead O2 teacher at Bridgewater school.

“It’s taking your math, your science and all those skills and putting them together to be able to actually complete a project and then see what it means to the rest of the school,” she says.

Ms Berrigan says each year 20 students take part in the project, with Grade 10s taking on the biggest role, as it’s part of their community-based learning class. She says the space will also be of use to the elementary school.

“I think it’s awesome because they let us try everything. They aren’t just like ‘go do this’, they’re like ‘would you like to try this?’” says O2 student Emily Banfield.

“I didn’t think I could ever do any of that.”

Students have had the chance to try out equipment such as a compactor and front loader.

“We have to measure before we weigh down our dirt and we have to spread that all out. We have to clean up after we’re done, we have to lay down brick — there’s a lot of physical work,” says participant Kady Joudrey.

Ms Berrigan says they wouldn’t have been able to complete the project without the help of the 14 Construction Engineering Squadron.

“They share their skills and their patience [and] understanding and they’re here when you need them.”

The Town of Bridgewater has also contributed $2,500 towards the project.

The project is currently in its fourth year. Eventually, students will turn the pavement area into a green space and will continue building on the project. In the future, they plans to have a multi-service play court, community gardens and walkways.

South Shore service learning projects

Besides Bridgewater High, five other local schools showcased service learning projects as part of the Options and Opportunities (O2) Program from June 2 to 6, including:

Forest Heights Community School: Students partnered with a local organization to assist with the design and construction of park benches and spring cleanup at Legacy Park in Chester Basin.

Liverpool Regional High School: Students installed stonework around the Healing Garden and held a smudging ceremony. The students also worked on preparing and servicing a reception.

New Germany Rural High School: O2 students worked with community experts to host a thank you dinner for co-op community hosts and other partners at the school.

North Queens Rural High School: Students planted vegetable gardens near senior living complexes to help engage the community and their school. As part of the showcase, they held a “transfer of responsibilities” to the community.

Park View Education Centre: O2 students worked with the school’s learning centre students and are assisting them in training for upcoming track and field meets. They’re learning how various disabilities impact the lives of students at the learning centre and also participate in their physical education classes.

Bridgewater's newest addition

By OLIVIA HILLIER and TARYN PERNETTE

Where can you go to swim, read in peace and sit down and enjoy a yummy snack all in one place? There are only four letters to answer your question — LCLC — otherwise known as the Lunenburg County Lifestyle Center.

The LCLC was built in Bridgewater on land donated by the Bridgewater Development Association. It has a rink, a pool and a library, all to help with education for both the mind and body. Many people didn't think they needed the LCLC but judging by the number of people who go there it looks like a lot of people have changed their minds.

Isobel Leslie, a staff member at the LCLC, said, "I love the LCLC and so do the staff," and "I've seen tons of people walk through these doors and automatically change their minds."

At the LCLC there is a canteen so you can sit back and relax with a smoothie and a giant cookie after a day at the pool. Isobel said "the canteen is very popular and some of the staff eat at the canteen."

The most popular section in the LCLC in the summer is the pool. Of course, in the summer the ice is out of the rink for two months. When the ice is in, both areas are very popular.

Are you wondering if you and/or your kids can do things at the LCLC? You can go to a summer camp. Registration started on June 4.

If you're wondering where and how to get a membership, you're in luck because the LCLC has you covered. You can register online or at the LCLC. Prices vary depending on your choice of membership.

"We don't need the LCLC" said the nonbelievers, and because of them one of the greatest ideas ever in Bridgewater was held back for 20 years. Then in 2013 the idea was made into reality. The LCLC was built so people in our generation can go out and get exercise in a fun way. They can even exercise their brains in the library, making their knowledge stronger and their writing skills better.

Hopefully you can come to this spectacular place so you can read, swim, skate and enjoy a lunch.

Cross-country is good for kids

By ALICIA WARDLOW and SYDNEY O'CONNOR

Cross-country running is fun and good for kids. All you need are your running shoes, a water bottle and a good attitude. It's a good way for exercise and also to get kids outside.

Taryn Pernette, a Grade 6 girl from Pentz Elementary School, said "It doesn't matter if you win or lose just do your personal best."

There are good and bad things about cross-country. Some bad things are there may be very competitive people there who may push and shove to get first. There may also be roots on the tracks you could trip over. You could also get cramps. The saddest thing about cross-country is when kids don't try out.

Some good things are that it is fun for kids and that kids could make new friends. Kids could also learn new things.

Many kids practice for cross-country at recess and lunchtime so they can do the best they can. This way they can get faster and have a better chance to win. Some people practice but don't care if they win or not.

Curtis Snyder, cross-country coach at Pentz said, "The purpose of cross country is to get every kid on a team from an early age, to love fitness and to be happy doing their personal best. If you're in cross country you chase the person in front of you, make sure the person behind you doesn't go ahead of you and represent your school. Make sure you're proud of yourself when you finish. We're very lucky to be able to use the MARC for our big run."

Overall, cross-country is a very good sport. It gets your legs moving and gets you outside. If you're not in cross-country that's okay, but you should definitely try it out.

Butterflies at Pentz

By HOLLY CROSS, DANIKA MEISNER and MADISON MALONEY

Butterflies are amazing creatures. Some are big and some are small. Some have pretty wings and some don't. They are different in many ways. Learning about butterflies in Grade 2/3 is a very educational opportunity. The students can learn about life cycles and watch the butterflies grow and learn about what kinds of habitats they need.

Ms Robar, the Grade 2/3 teacher, said "We are keeping painted lady butterflies. The butterflies are in their cocoons for about two weeks. The students give them Gatorade and nectar to drink. It is educational for the children because they get to see the life cycle."

Even though the butterflies do not need a lot of care, Ms Robar lets the children help out. Helping butterflies is a science-first, hands-on experience. Some butterflies die if they fall in their pupa because they can't get out. After the butterflies are out of the cocoon the students carefully release them on the playground.

It is believed some species are going extinct because of climate change that no one can fix. Pollution is another reason butterflies are going extinct. Everyone can help try to fix pollution by walking or biking.

One more concern is loss of habitat. To help with new habitats, people can join the butterfly club and learn more about planting milkweed to provide homes and food for butterflies. The club encourages people to plant milkweed and help improve the butterflies' habitat. Without milkweed the larvae can't eat and they will die. Maybe Pentz Elementary can try to plant milkweed so more butterflies will be around all our neighbourhood?

A Grade 2 student said, "Butterflies lay about 24 eggs at one time. They're fun to watch grow up. I am very happy to have butterflies in the room."

Temporary skate park for Bridgewater

By LOGAN WAMBACK, DANIEL SNYDER and HAIDEN JOUDREY

Last year the Town of Bridgewater said by 2014 there was going to be a skate park. At the present time there is a small, temporary park in the back parking lot of the Lunenburg County Lifestyle Centre (LCLC). It has two small portable jumps, a quarter pipe, a grind rail and a box for jumping. Daniel Snyder goes to the park and said, "It is good for a few people but not a big crowd."

Mark Feindel, the chairman of the Bridgewater Skate Park and an avid skateboarder, said "money is the main problem." The new park will cost $670,000. At the moment they have $50,000 raised.

Mark said the money comes mostly from grants and that he hopes to break ground in three years. The grants came from the Municipality of Lunenburg and the Town of Bridgewater. The new park will be located next to the LCLC. All types of activities, such as skate boards, bikes and scooters will be allowed, and there will be no age restriction at the new park. They are planning a gazebo with the idea of having monthly concerts.

Logan, a Grade 6 student at Pentz Elementary School,

The temporary skate park is next to the woods where the new one will be built.

said the new park will be better and closer than Chester and won't waste money on gas.

Introducing the world of Bluetooths

By BRETON CHARMAN and SARA GREENOUGH

Bluetooth technology is a big part of today's vehicles. The steering wheels have all sorts of new buttons and gadgets to keep your hands off the control panel and your eyes on the road.

Even though adults no longer have to worry about people typing numbers, they still have to consider people getting distracted.

Many car companies offer Bluetooth technology in their newer models. We contacted two of these companies, Honda and Dodge. Honda's salesman Kris said "90 per cent of our cars now have Bluetooth standard. You can have it installed for anywhere from $1,000 to $2,000."

Having Bluetooth in your car doesn't add a cent to your bill. It just uses your regular cell phone minutes.

Dodge's representative salesman Nick said, "50 per cent of our cars have Bluetooth. It is an easy hands-free set up and is equipped when buying the car. When talking on Bluetooth, you are only using your minutes with no additional price."

Although this great invention is a way to keep your eyes focused on the road, people can get lost in thought about their own conversation and get distracted. You shouldn't use Bluetooth if you are not able to keep your emotions under control and another downfall is some devices don't work with Bluetooth.

While interviewing adults they said Bluetooth could make a big difference when hands-free and used properly. Mrs. Grace said, "Bluetooth can make a big difference when you can keep your hands on the wheel."

Mr. Greenough said, "If I were to upgrade Bluetooth I would make it so that you can add Bluetooth in once you buy the car without going to a car company."

In conclusion, you can tell Bluetooth has its ups and downs. Keeping your eyes on the road is easy but you can be overwhelmed in your conversations.

Café makes learning French fun

The cafés were nice and neat. They had tablecloths, plates, bowls and some of the students had decorations on the table. Students had to take the orders in French. All of the cafés had a menu written in French. There were three or four people in each group so one person went to each table.

Food served at the cafés included muffins, cookies, ice cream, cheeses, nachos, Jolly Ranchers and beef jerky. At the cafés, a lot of people learned how to order in French and they learned how to serve and greet customers. The people who ordered all had to say "merci," which means "thank you." The people who took the order said "de rien," which means "you're welcome."

Madame Stead, our French teacher, said "I really like to watch people learn and I love the French language. While teaching French I get to do both of those things."

She wanted to learn French because her grandmother spoke it. Her father's family are French Acadians and she used to be a Fougere.

Madame Stead said "I absolutely love being a French teacher, the sound of French and getting to teach it to other people."

Student Olivia Hillier said "It was a fun way to learn how to speak French." She liked how the cafés were set up to have her friends waiting on her.

An Amazon drone receives a package from one of many conveyor belts.

By BENJAMIN CONRAD

Amazon has had a breakthrough in the mailing of parcels in a new speedy and quick way. Drones, like remote controlled helicopters, could possibly be speeding mail around in locations all over the world by 2015.

Developed in Amazon's R&D lab dubbed Project Prime Air, the drones sport eight blades and a GPS system to send it to the right location and have sensors to avoid obstacles.

Jeff Bezos, head of Amazon, said "We are getting closer to delivery by drone," when he introduced Project Prime Air. The benefit of the drones is they will deliver parcels five pounds and under in 30 minutes or less. Eighty-six per cent of the packages on Amazon are five pounds and under. Also, there would be no more long waits for parcels to arrive.

However, there is always the worry of people shooting down the drones to steal what's in the package. Please don't, because the cost of manufacturing the drone is very expensive.

What does this mean for the post office? When a representative of the local post office in Bridgewater, Paul McDonald, was asked "What might happen if people start taking a liking to Amazon's drones, and with the rapid multiplying of email users what will happen to the post office and its users?" Mr. McDonald answered "We are already noticing a reduction in customers but we do have a new Epost site that people can do email and banking through."

Whether we like it or not soon the age of the drones will arrive and the post office will have to adapt to get by.

The pros and cons of video games

By MATTHEW CORKUM, JOSHUA BLAND and CONNOR SHAW

Video games can be fun and recreational. However, they can also be addictive and bad for the mind.

Greg Bland, a helper for kids at camps, said "I do enjoy an occasional video game with a family member but I'd rather have a bike ride." Being outside will give kids fresh air and they will have a better temper and better grades in school.

Video games can hurt your brain, but they can teach you lessons, too. Games like "Brain Age" and "Civilization Revolution" can teach you things. Brain Age can teach you math and other things like that. Civilization Revolution can teach you historical facts and it can help your brain develop strategy.

The best part of video games is you can play with friends who are far away. You don't need to be athletic and it's something to do when you're bored.

Gamers can improve hand-eye coordination, problem-solving skills and the mind's ability to process information.

But too much video game playing may lead to health problems. Some health problems are repetitive brain injuries, skin disorders and epilepsy seizures.

Scientists proved that playing video games can help your brain if you only play them for about half an hour. They proved it can improve your memory skills and creativity, but remember that's only if you don't play

Simon Brown, front, and Kegan Harlow work on a writing project using iPads.

By SIMON BROWN and KEGAN HARLOW

Everyone has opinions on iPads in schools. Pentz Elementary School has several new iPads and students use them for writing, reading and researching, and an occasional game. iPads can be good and bad for helping students learn.

Money for iPads wasn't a problem for kids at Pentz because of school fundraisers and the Home and School paid for the iPads. Buying the iPads took away funds from gym equipment, art supplies and class trips, but students and teachers feel it was worth it.

Jim Dexter, Coordinator of Technology Integration and Data Management for the South Shore Regional School Board, said "iPads can be useful if teachers set rules." That's because there are students who would play games the whole time. He also said he hopes "stores that sell iPads will lower prices."

A Grade 4 student at Pentz Elementary said "iPads can be good for writing. It has also improved my spelling and grammar."

Another student said people who are trying to joke around might erase the memory on the iPad which means you get rid of everything on the iPad and that could effect other classes.

iPads are not as restricting as computers. They can't lock websites like YouTube. When kids are working they could be watching YouTube. This could help by showing how to do something but it can also be distracting.

Students at Pentz elementary should be thrilled to have iPads to do work on. It's a good way to explore the world of technology around you and obtain information on many topics.

them for hours and hours.

Some of those video games you might think are fun can be the ones that are the worst for the mind. They can desensitize you, like "Black Ops" and "Grand Theft Auto 5," which was even banned in some countries. Some video games can be very dangerous because people can hack your system and spam you with messages.

Games can be fun and kids should be able to play them but going outdoors is healthier and helps with social skills.

New Ross unveils strategic plan

Goals include increasing, retaining business

By ROBERT HIRTLE
rhirtle@southshorenov.ca

NEW ROSS — There's lots of potential for development in the New Ross area.

That's the message Chester Municipal Council recently received when members of the New Ross Regional Development Society unveiled their strategic plan during a public meeting at Forest Heights Community School.

Society member Scott Hamlin opened the presentation with the genesis of the plan.

"It started back in September 2011. Four of us got together — Rubia Hutt, Jamie Warr, Tina Connors and myself — sat down at Vittles Restaurant in New Ross and the idea was brought forward for us to have a community plan," Mr.

Hamlin recalled.

"New Ross suffers the same affliction that many other communities are suffering today. Our kids are moving away, we're just growing older. We wanted somehow to change that pattern."

Mr. Hamlin said since the recent release of the Ivany Report, "we all see ourselves involved with that decline ... so we thought with a strategic plan where we all get together as a community to focus on a point would help us get through the future better."

To that end, society members took the strategic plan which had been developed for the community of Hubbards, and, through a series of meetings facilitated by Chester Parks and Recreation Director Chad Haughn and Debby Smith of the Nova Scotia Department of Health promotion and Protection, revised it to suit the New Ross area.

"I believe we hit it just about right. We have a path to follow now to bring us into the future," he said, adding very little money was spent on developing the plan, so it "really was a home-grown project."

Dave Meister then took the floor and presented an outline of the plan, which includes a series of strategic goals aiming to increase business, visitors and community vitality; retain present businesses; and improve and expand partnerships and community assets.

The document also contains information garnered from a 2013 town hall meeting attended by about 50 residents, as well as other sources.

"It's been a real exciting experience for someone like me who's only been in the community for about three years," Mr. Meister said. "It's been rejuvenating to see this type of energy in a small rural community."

Warden Allan Webber said there is "absolutely nothing" in the New Ross Strategic Plan which does not align with that of the overall municipality.

"New Ross has always been a vibrant community, well able to determine it's own pathway," he said. "Tonight is just a further demonstration of that ability and that commitment."

"It's been rejuvenating to see this type of energy in a small rural community."

Sweet Ride, sweet service

Business a one-stop shop for candy and cycling

By LEENA ALI

lali@southshorenova.ca

Picture an old-fashioned candy store with taffy and Chiclets, add a full-service bike shop and you've got Sweet Ride Cycling.

Located in the heart of Mahone Bay, the shop was opened in 2011 by Rose and Alan MacEachen. The two wanted to blend their passion for cycling with the nostalgic candy shops from their childhoods.

Ms MacEachen, who grew up in Mahone Bay, kept her small-town upbringing in mind when they moved back to the Maritimes from Ottawa about four years ago. The couple wanted their nine-year-old son to have a similar experience.

"We love small town Nova Scotia. It's been fantastic for our son here. His freedom has exponentially increased and he's become an involved cyclist as well," says Mr. MacEachen, who is originally from Cape Breton.

The family has been enjoying the lifestyle on the South Shore, and business wise, have found great support from the community since they began.

"We've been super delighted with how it's gone," says Mr. MacEachen.

"There's enough cycling traffic that come through the South Shore that we've found there's been enough support — the locals have been fantastic. We see a pretty good regular group of riders around here and there's a lot of summertime traffic."

Sweet Ride Cycling offers everything from bicycle sales, rentals, clothing, accessories and repairs. Bicycle fittings are also a major part of the business.

"We run into a lot of people that have issues or problems fitting on bikes, so we do a lot of modifications to make it more comfortable [and] medically safe," says Mr. MacEachen, who is a certified master fitter. The life-long cyclist started working in a bike shop during his university days and has enjoyed it ever since.

Ms MacEachen always cycled for fun but got more involved when the couple began mountain biking in Ottawa during the '90s.

"When our son was born we realized it would be very hard to pull a chariot over the mountain bike trails and that, perhaps road riding would be more appropriate," laughs Ms MacEachen.

Now, the couple share their love of cycling with the rest of the community — whether that's through assisting with a fitting, or even giving some cycling advice.

"We're seeing more and more of the senior citizens who are retiring and want a nice low-impact activity.

But we often hear 'I can't ride my bike anymore because it's too low, it's uncomfortable, I'm afraid of falling off,'" she says, adding more comfortable bikes which help with stability are leading to more people riding.

"I find that incredibly exciting to get people back out on their bikes again when they felt that it wasn't something that they could continue doing."

Both owners will tell you about the importance of having the right fit when you're riding.

"To us, fit is everything — that's what determines the quality of your ride. If you're uncomfortable, that's what you're going to focus on," says Mr. MacEachen, adding there's always a benefit to having a better fit and position on your bike, whether you're a competitive or recreational cyclist.

"Being a small female rider you notice the difference of what it's like always trying to fit on what used to be a men's product," says Ms MacEachen.

"Now, there's so much out there for women and women-specific products."

Sweet Ride also hosts group rides and has a cycling club. Last year, the couple started a week-long day camp in partnership with the Municipality of Lunenburg for kids aged eight to 14. They've also partnered with an after-school program which focuses on helping junior-high-aged girls get more active.

Mr. MacEachen says the trail network on the South Shore has added to the cycling experience, since many customers will travel from Halifax to visit the shop specifically for its service.

"I think people appreciate that fact that the service is consistent, every time you come in you're dealing with the same people," says Mr. MacEachen.

The shop's comfortable atmosphere also attracts people of all generations.

"[What] I really enjoy about our shop is with the candy and the light-hearted sort of aspect of it — it's not as intimidating as a sport shop can be," says Ms MacEachen.

"It keeps it light and whimsical and there's something for everybody."

"I find that incredibly exciting to get people back out on their bikes again when they felt that it wasn't something that they could continue doing."

Tory leader emphasizes Ivany report urgency

By KEITH CORCORAN
kcorcoran@southshorenov.ca

COUNTY — While selling his jobs and economy tour to Bridgewater area business leaders in Pine Grove recently, Nova Scotia Opposition leader Jamie Baillie isn't buying why the McNeil Liberal government, as he believes, appears to be moving at a snail's pace concerning the Ivany report.

"Let me put it this way, when the government gets a report called Now or Never, and then sits on it for 100 days, something is wrong," Mr. Baillie said in a telephone interview.

Chamber of commerce manager, Dan Hennessey, said about 50 people attended the May 29 luncheon at the Osprey Ridge Golf Club where Mr. Baillie was the keynote speaker. The Ivany Commission's report on the province's economy, viewed by some as a definitive guide for Nova Scotia's wealth management salvation, was a main pillar of Mr. Baillie's address, Mr. Hennessey indicated.

"No one knows better than the people of the South Shore the importance of turning our economy around. Five thousand five hundred people gave up on the labour force in the last five years along the South Shore," Mr. Baillie told southshorenov.ca and the Lunenburg County Progress Bulletin. "That's 5,500 people unemployed or working somewhere else."

A series of town hall-style meetings are planned across the province to talk about ideas that could bolster job creation, he said. It's also a chance for the Tories to tout their own economic plan, including their idea of scrapping the small business tax.

He commented about the Bluenose II restoration, a multi-year project cursed by numerous delays and skyrocketing costs.

He had kind words for South Shore-St. Margaret's Conservative MP Gerald Keddy who announced he's not running for re-election in 2015.

Mr. Baillie hadn't had a chance to talk directly to Mr. Keddy at the time of the interview, but had a message he wanted to pass along: "Hey man, thanks for ... years of doing it right and sticking with us in good times and bad times and, although you're retiring from federal politics, there's this thing called the Nova Scotia Progressive Conservative party and there's always a home for you here."

Days after the interview, Mr. Baillie was named as one of the vice-chair-people of a new coalition tasked with developing an action plan in response to the Ivany report.

"The coalition will develop and deliver a 10-year, province-wide plan to meet population and economic renewal goals," the province said in a statement. "In the coming months, it will also launch a public engagement program to involve all Nova Scotians in that plan and to pursue and profile early action that supports the goals outlined in the Now or Never report."

High Liner Foods chief executive, Henry Demone, is one of the members of the coalition.

Bridgewater plans 'I wish I was' event

Downtown merchants ponder business improvement district concept

By REBECCA DINGWELL
rdingwell@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — Ida Scott is one of several people trying to draw attention to existing merchants and the possibility of new ones in Bridgewater through a downtown business improvement district (BID).

"Businesses come together and form a business improvement district so that they can have more say — whether it's going to the town about changes to zone by-laws or applying for funding for façade improvement," explained Ms Scott, manager of the Bridgewater Development Association and member of the BID steering committee.

Ms Scott said a BID would allow for collaborative marketing, which would be more efficient and save money, and "makes it a lot more attractive for businesses to come in and rent vacant space."

That excessive amount of vacant buildings downtown inspired an upcoming 'I Wish I Was' event, which encourages property owners to open their doors so the public may come inside and "identify what they feel is lacking downtown."

Small decals will be available for the public to write on and stick in the windows of the buildings.

"People can write, 'I wish I was an art gallery,' or 'I wish I was a soda shop' or something like that," said Ms Scott.

Spaces such as the Cummings building, the LaHave Furnishings building and the Baptist church will be participating in the event. In addition, participating downtown restaurants have donated vouchers to be handed out to those who attend.

"It's really to engage the public so that they can understand, maybe, what's behind the walls of some of those buildings."

The Bridgewater Development Association is also encouraging young people to come out on the day of the event — June 25 — to take photos and videos to post on social media.

Meanwhile, the BID concept has been in the works since September 2011 and Ms Scott hopes the concept will become reality by September, but there still needs to be a vote on the matter.

River boat tours approved

Council endorses company's bid to operate

By LEENA ALI
lali@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — The Town of Bridgewater has approved a request to allow boat tours on the LaHave River for the 2014 season.

Creaser's Cove Boat Tours have been granted permission to depart from Shipyard's Landing and will tentatively begin operation this July.

"The river is beautiful and we would like to see if maybe the tourists would come to Bridgewater to stay and then go on a boat tour," says tour operator Liz Drake.

During a June 9 meeting, council amended a property bylaw to allow the request.

However, the amendment does not preclude other boat operators from proposing similar requests.

"They'd have to apply to council or our recreation department in order to get permission to operate, but I think there's good potential there," says Deputy Mayor Bill McInnis.

A member of the hotel industry had approached the town's recreation department in hopes of promoting river tours to guests. The member was representing the Day's Inn, Comfort Inn and Best Western and had made arrangements with Creaser's Cove Boat Tours.

"We just said 'sure we would be interested,' because we always like to promote the river," says Ms Drake.

"We're going to go from Shipyard's Landing down to the bakery in LaHave and we're going to stop there and let the people off and walk around ... do a little sight seeing there, and then we're going to take them back [up] the river."

The boat tours can transport 12 passengers at a time and are about three to four hours long. Details of the tours have not been finalized but they hope to operate about three times a week.

The company had operated tours on the LaHave River and the LaHave Islands for nine years, up until about 2005.

"The river is beautiful and we would like to see if maybe the tourists would come to Bridgewater to stay and then go on a boat tour."

Exporting 411 meetings being planned

The Municipality of the District of Lunenburg and the Municipality of the Queens are initiating a series of information sessions on businesses exporting.

"Exporting is crucial to our country's and province's economic health," said Municipality of Lunenburg Economic Development Officer Viorica Sporea in a release.

"Increased exports mean business growth, and business growth means more jobs. Unfortunately, only a small percentage of potential exporters take advantage of these opportunities."

Recent Industry Canada small business statistics reveal less than three per cent of Nova Scotia businesses export.

"It is critical for NS businesses to think globally," said the release.

Five sessions are expected to take place from July through to November and explore topics such as advantages and disadvantages of exporting, international market research, market entry, negotiation of international sales and distributorship agreements.

The sessions are expected to be built around three major questions:

1. Why is exporting beneficial to your business?
2. How to get prepared for exporting and everything you need to know about the processes involved?
3. Who can assist you?

Sarah June Maginley

Sarah June Maginley, age 80, of Mahone Bay, died on Tuesday, June 10, 2014 in South Shore Regional Hospital, Bridgewater, of cancer.
June was born in Prince Edward Island, the daughter of Brent and Rita (Mobbs) Eikhoud.

She worked at newspapers in Charlottetown and Saint John, NB before marrying her first husband, the late Rev. Flemming Holm, in 1957. They lived in various communities in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and had four children.
June obtained a degree in social work from Dalhousie University in 1982 and married her second husband, Charles Douglas Maginley, in Sydney in the same year. They moved to Mahone Bay in 1990 where they operated The Garden Gate B&B for several years.

June was an artist at heart who expressed her fine sense of colour and beauty in interior decorating, gardening, flower arranging, photography, stained glass, rug hooking and her own personal style. Abiding interests in psychology and spirituality led her to explore paths which were off the beaten track for her time and place, and which developed the grace and wisdom that touched the lives of those close to her.

She is survived by her husband, Charles Douglas, Mahone Bay; daughter, Heather Holm (Steve Sepulchre) and grandson, Malcolm Sepulchre, Martins Point; daughter, Pamela Holm, Ottawa; son, Michael Holm (Dorcas Beaton), Toronto; daughter, Carol Holm (Blake Rink), Calgary; sister, Shirley Harbottle, Ancaster, ON; two nephews and two nieces.

She was pre-deceased by her brother, Cecil; and sister, Helen Rose.
In her last days she was surrounded by her loving family. Heartfelt thanks to the wonderful staff on the 4th floor of SSRH. A service celebrating her life will be held in Mahone Bay at a later date which will be announced in this newspaper. On-line condolences at www.JuneMaginley.ca.

Edith Pauline Nauss

NAUSS, Edith Pauline, 79, of Middle Cornwall, passed away June 7, 2014, at South Shore Regional Hospital, surrounded by her family.

Born in Middle Cornwall, she was a daughter of the late Glen and Helen (Eisnor) Aulenback.

Edith worked as a babysitter for many years in her earlier life. Her favourite past times were doing crafts, looking after her birds and flowers and especially spending time with her family. In the last few years, she regrew her passion for her cats and spent many hours watching and looking after them.

Edith is survived by daughters, Rose Hatt (Scott Cullen); Judy (Kurt) Dominix; three very special granddaughters, Natasha (Corey) and Niketa Dominix; Shelby Cullen, all of Middle Cornwall; sisters, Verna Grandy and Betty Kilfoy, both of Lunenburg; brother, Cecil (Myrtle) Eisnor, Middle Cornwall; sister-in-law, Cora Aulenback, Bridgewater; many nieces and nephews. She was predeceased by her husband, Ozem; brother, Lawson.

A graveside memorial service was held 3 p.m., Thursday, June 12 at New Cornwall Baptist Church Cemetery, Rev. Douglas Porter officiated. Memorial donations may be made to Canadian Cancer Society, Canadian Diabetes Association, New Cornwall Baptist Cemetery, New Cornwall Fire Department.

Arrangements entrusted to the care of Mahone Funeral Home, P.O. Box 200, 32 Parish St., Mahone Bay, NS B0J 2E0 624-8241. On-line condolences may be sent to the family by visiting <http://www.mahonefuneral.ca>.

Thank you to the Intensive Care Unit at South Shore Regional Hospital, nurses Lillian and Ashley, Dr. West and Dr. Ratushny, Dr. Abud, paramedics and the New Cornwall Fire Department who were always there for Mom.

Harris "Douglas" Ritcey

Friends of Doug Ritcey will be sorry to learn of his passing on June 10, 2014, a summer resident of Middle LaHave for many years.

A memorial service was held at Fort Massey United Church in Halifax on June 13, 2014.

In memory of Doug, donations may be made to Trinity United Church, Riverport, NS B0J 2W0 and / or Fort Massey United Church, Halifax.

God saw that you were tired, a cure was not to be, He took you in His loving arms and whispered, "Come to Me."

You didn't deserve what you went through and so He gave you rest, His garden must be beautiful, He only takes the best.

It broke our hearts to lose you but you did not go alone, part of us went with you the day God called you home. The face we love is missing, the voice we love is still, a place is vacant in our hearts that never can be filled.

So many times we've missed you, So many times we've cried, If our love could have saved you, You never would have died.

To your resting place we visit And place our flowers there, No one knows the heart-ache

As we turn and leave you there. There's a bridge of beautiful memories

From here to Heaven above, It keeps you very close to us, It's called the bridge of love.

Put Your arms around her, Lord, Treat her with special care, Make up for all she suffered And all that seemed unfair.

You took her home, it was Your will But in our hearts we love her still.

Her memory is as dear today As in the hour she passed away.

It broke our hearts to lose you You did not go alone, For part of us went with you The day God called you home.

You left us precious memories Your love is still our guide, And though we cannot see you You are always at our side.

Our family chain is broken

And nothing seems the same, But as God calls us one by one The chain will link again.

Happy 5th birthday in Heaven Rissy.

Western Shore walk benefits ALS research

Joan Swinamer, wearing the white ball cap, joins a crew in Western Shore participating in a walk for Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS) awareness, research and support.

By KEITH CORCORAN
kcorcoran@southshorenw.ca

WESTERN SHORE — Hopes for new medications able to treat Lou Gehrig's disease on the horizon have supporters working to eradicate the neurodegenerative disease optimistic about the years ahead.

"We're hoping to have two drugs come to stage 2 clinical trial this year. That's huge," said Kim Carter, president of the province's ALS (Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis) society. "Right now we only have one drug that treats ALS and to date it's minimally effective."

Ms Carter was speaking in Western Shore recently before the start of the community's fifth-annual ALS fundraising walk, which raises money for awareness, research, services and equipment.

ALS is an incurable disease which zeroes in on motor neurons in the brain, interfering with their ability to communicate instructions to the body's muscles. Most people with ALS die within two to five years of their diagnosis.

"We haven't found a cure yet but we will one day, and when we do, you guys will have been a part of it," Ms Carter told the group of enthusiastic walkers gathered outside the Western Shore fire hall.

She said most of the donated cash stays in the province to help pay for equipment loans, hospital beds, communication devices, breathing machines and wheelchairs.

Western Shore walk coordinator Elizabeth Arsenault, whose dad lost his ALS battle a few years ago, was appreciative of the provincial society's assistance, which prompted her passion for advocacy.

"The ALS society of Nova Scotia provided my father with thousands of dollars worth of equipment to make his life easier during his days with ALS, all free of charge," she told walk participants.

Nearly half of the fundraising money goes to the national ALS organization to aid researchers.

"In 1993 we had three ALS researchers in Canada," Ms Carter said. "Today we have over 100."

Western Shore's ALS walk has raised over $57,500 during its existence, including about $21,000 in 2013 alone.

Lorraine Boutilier, diagnosed with ALS about six years ago, took part in a ribbon-cutting ceremony to mark the start of this year's event.

Bridgewater's 'Gutsy Walk' raises over $18,000

By KEITH CORCORAN
kcorcoran@southshorenov.ca

BRIDGEWATER — Bridgewater's first fundraising walk and run in support of inflammatory bowel disease research eclipsed organizer's expectations, collecting over $18,000 in donations in a campaign to eliminate ailments such as Crohn's and Colitis.

More than 200 participants had the choice of roaming a 2.5 kilometre journey or sauntering a five-km trek on June 8. Both routes were in town.

"With this kind of support we'll find a cure for all inflammatory bowel disease," said Jonathan O'Donnell, the "Gutsy Walk" event's honorary chairman, diagnosed with Crohn's about four years ago.

His Crohn's is under control but it took efforts to find the right medications to corral the stresses on his gastrointestinal tract. Jonathan is the son of Jody O'Donnell, tasked with helping organize Bridgewater's first "Gutsy Walk."

Lunenburg West MLA Mark Furey also added a personal touch to the June event, noting his son, Chad, was diagnosed with Crohn's at age 10.

Graduating from Dalhousie University with a masters in engineering, Chad's operating a gym in Dartmouth and living a healthy life, Mr. Furey told the event's opening ceremonies.

Early on in Chad's life, it wasn't uncommon to see him deal with a food tube during swimming or hockey-related activities.

"His ability to deal with Crohn's at such a young age and the support that his teammates and parents and the broad community gave to him really speaks to who he is to this day and the confidence that he has in himself to overcome any challenge in his life," Mr. Furey said.

Nearly 15,000 people in close to 60 communities in Canada took part in "Gutsy Walks" this year.

Education panel chair meets with students

By PAULA LEVY
plevy@southshorenov.ca

New Ross Consolidated School students welcomed provincial education panel chairwoman Myra Freeman last week.

Ms Freeman is leading a task force to identify ways to strengthen Nova Scotia's public education system.

As part the review, the panel posted an on-line survey. To encourage participation, an invitation was sent out to schools across the province to welcome a member of the six-person panel to lead a focus group.

In New Ross, Ms Freeman met with combined Grades 7 and 8 class. During her presentation, Ms Freeman explained to the students the purpose of the panel and the importance of students participating in the survey. Submissions for the survey closed last week.

The former lieutenant governor said she was enthused by comments from the students, especially one who wanted the school day extended in favour of a shorter school year, and that simply asking for students' opinions meant a lot.

"The one comment that came forward is they were so pleased that they were asked."

The panel is expected to release a report on their findings in the fall. That report will be presented to Education Minister Karen Casey.

New Ross principal Lindsay Willow said following Ms Freeman's visit that she had an opportunity to discuss funding for rural schools such as New Ross Consolidated. Ms Willow said she wants to see funding formulas look beyond enrolment numbers, and that funding should be based upon need.

"We need to fund accordingly so we're getting the best quality education in all buildings," said Ms Willow, adding rural schools are currently accomplishing amazing things with little funding.

TRUE BLOOD SEASON 7

Sunday, June 22, 2014
HBO

The not-so-sleepy small town of Bon Temps, La., has seen more than its fair share of death and drama throughout the last six seasons of HBO's hit supernatural show "True Blood," and you can be sure there's plenty more to come as its seventh and final season kicks off Sunday, June 22, on the cabler. Oscar-winner Anna Paquin ("The Piano," 1993) stars as the young, vivacious and telepathic small-town waitress Sookie Stackhouse.
